

BETTER TELEGRAPH PLANNED FOR READERS

Washington — Aside from the very real danger that the Spanish civil war may bring war flames for all Europe, Secretary of State Hull is keenly worried about the Spanish combat itself.

He tells close friends that nothing can be more devastating to a nation and its people than civil strife. And he illustrates his point with the experiences of his own family during the war between the North and the South.

His family, he explains, lived in Tennessee, in a section of the country split between the two sides. It was impossible for them to stay neutral. The result was that different members of the family joined opposing sides, and the family was torn to pieces.

Privately, Hull's sympathies are very much with the Spanish government, though he believes firmly that the United States must remain absolutely neutral. Some of his underlings, however, have thrown their weight sub rosa toward the Fascist insurgents.

Ten Commandments

New York Supreme Court Justice Ferdinand Pecora's two-fisted advocacy of the President's court plan drew a barrage of sharp questions from opposition senators. In the course of a brisk exchange with Senator "Long-Tom" Connally, Pecora made a reference to the Ten Commandments:

"Snapped Connally: 'I don't think either one of us is an authority on the Ten Commandments.'"

"Probably not," returned Pecora sweetly, "but I at least have read them."

"And I," retorted Connally, flushing angrily at the wave of laughter that greeted Pecora's sly barb, "endeavor to observe them. And now, Mr. Chairman, having reached the Ten Commandments I think it is a good place to stop."

Tax Troubles

President Roosevelt is earnestly against increasing taxes this year. Congress, even more earnestly, agrees with him. But just the same, don't rule out new tax legislation.

A tax boosting bill may yet make its appearance on Capitol Hill.

Real inside fact is that the admitted $81,000,000 shortage in income tax receipts tells only partly how far Treasury estimates went wrong. Big Bertha shortages in three other revenue sources left great gaping holes in budget estimates.

These items are social security, "windfall" and railroad pension taxes. Of these the most important and the biggest disappointment was social security revenue.

Roosevelt's budget estimated that this source would yield $234,600,000 by June 30. But to March 22 it yielded only $53,787,000, or about one-sixth of expectations.

The so-called "windfall" taxes (AAA processing taxes that the government is seeking to recover) are down in the budget for $82,000,000. But so far only $1,922,000 has been collected. The rail taxes were budgeted at $134,552,000, have yielded only $228,000.

This out of an anticipated half billion of revenue the treasury has received but $56,000,000—approximately one-tenth of the budget estimate—with only three months to go.

Treasury executives believe there still is a chance that the remaining three months of the fiscal year will make up the deficits on these items. Their optimism may be justified. Unless it is, there will be a new tax bill.

Statesman

Bustling into the Senate judiciary committee, where he was scheduled to testify against the President's court plan, Representative William Lemke encountered Senator William King.

"Well, hello, statesman," remarked King. "Going to spout again, eh?"

Senate Expenses

The expense account for running the United States Senate reveals these oddities:

Uniforms of Capitol police are cleaned and pressed at a cost of 55 cents each.

The Senate pays $1 each for blacklacks for the police force.

Thomas E. Harly, chauffeur to the Vice-President, is paid $1,920 a year.

The Vice President bought a windshield decrioter for $2.75.

Max Lowenthal, counsel to the committee on interstate commerce, made a practise of sleeping in upper berths when he traveled between New York and Washington.

The Senate restaurant pays its help as low as $26.25 a month.

HIGH COURT UP TO WORK CLERK SAYS

Reports to Senate Committee After Glass' Attack

Washington, March 30.—(AP)—The Supreme Court clerk filed with the senate judiciary committee today a letter showing "the dispatch with which the court is currently disposing of its business" and listing rules recently adopted by the high tribunal to speed its procedure.

The letter was written by Charles Elmore Cropley, clerk of the court, in response to a request from the committee for a report on the status of the court's docket for each year since 1925. Senator Austin (R-Vt.), an opponent of the Roosevelt court bill, requested the information.

Chairman Ashurst (D-Ariz.) placed Cropley's letter before the committee today as testimony in opposition to the court bill was resumed after a week end recess.

Another huge crowd was on hand to hear Professor Erwin N. Griswold of Harvard law school propose a constitutional amendment fixing the terms of Supreme Court justices at 18 years.

Opposing the Roosevelt bill, Griswold said it would "break down the barriers" which have protected the independence of the Supreme Court.

Court Up to Docket

Cropley noted that the once familiar condition of cases being heard during a term but not decided until the next term "disappeared beginning with the October term, 1929."

"In that term, as in every succeeding one," he reported, "the court has decided all cases argued or submitted and has carried none under advisement into a subsequent term."

Both side in the dispute endeavored today to capitalize on the Court's elimination of what Roosevelt once called the "no man's land" on minimum wage legislation for women.

Senator Minton (D-Ind.), an advocate of the Roosevelt bill, contended the court's 5 to 4 decision yesterday upholding the Washington state wage law and reversing its previous position "showed it is a human institution and proves what the president has been talking about."

Senator Burke (D-Neb.), a leader of the opposition, drew different conclusions from the minimum wage decision and the unanimous approval of the revised Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage moratorium and the railroad labor act.

Opponents' View

"First," he said, "the rulings illustrated the present court can and will interpret the constitutional liberally in the light of modern conditions, so legislation to affect the majority viewpoint—even if it were proper—is not needed."

"Second, sound procedure is to draft legislation carefully, as was done with the substitute mortgage law, to meet constitutional points made in adverse court decisions."

Used Auto Story

Alliance, O., March 30.—(AP)—Mrs. W. H. Shaw of Alliance reported that her cousin, Roy Kooztz, of Bloomington, Ind., bought a used car in Cleveland for $150.

When he cleaned the antique, he found a dime dated 1921 under a seat cushion. A coin expert offered him $450 for the dime.

Fashionable Chicago Suburb Is Agog Today Over Alleged Romance

Chicago, March 30.—(AP)—The fashionable north suburb of Winnetka was agog today over the alleged romance of David J. Wood, its fire captain, and the socially prominent Mrs. Caroline de Windt Gardner, who formerly lived across the street from the fire house.

Mrs. Gardner was brought into the marital squabble of the Woods couple yesterday by Mrs. Gertrude Wood, petite and dark haired, who asked separate maintenance in answer to her husband's divorce suit.

HIGHLIGHTS

Pertinent Paragraphs From Address By Senator Glass

Following are a few of the highlights of the radio address of Senator Carter Glass, 79-year-old Democratic Senator from Virginia, delivered last night against the proposal made by President Franklin D. Roosevelt that he be permitted to pack the Supreme Court of the United States. The text of the veteran statesman's address will be found on page 6 of this issue of the Telegraph.

"Confessedly I am speaking tonight from the depths of a soul filled with bitterness against a proposition which appears to me utterly destitute of moral sensibility and without parallel since the foundation of the republic."

"The White House proposal is without precedent in the history of American jurisprudence. Its consequences portend evils beyond the anxiety of any person concerned for a decent administration in this country."

"Standing ready to curse them" (quoting Woodrow Wilson on court packers), that vividly describes the attitude of thinking men and women everywhere in America today toward this hateful attempt to drive eminent jurists from the bench in order to crowd into the court a lot of judicial marionettes to speak the ventriloquisms of the White House."

"I venture to beg the public not to be diverted from the real issue involved in this controversy. Contesting the court's constitutional authority to void acts of Congress is idle surplusage."

"The talk about 'party loyalty' being involved in the opposition to this extraordinary scheme is a familiar species of coercion. It is sheer poppycock."

"Should the iniquitous scheme go through, the intelligence and character of the nation will be interested to know what lawyer of notable attainments or independent spirit would be willing to go on the Supreme Court bench in such circumstances or could regard such an appointment as an honor."

Lovett Will Filed in Lee County Court

The will of the late J. M. Lovett of Ashton, who passed away Feb. 22 at Monroville, Ala., was admitted to probate before Judge Leon Zick in the county court this morning. Heirs named are as follows: Gordon of Amboy, a son; Joseph of Amboy, a son; Mrs. R. L. Emig of Detroit, Mich., a daughter; Mary Elenor Emig of Detroit, a granddaughter; J. A. B. Lovett of Hamilton, Ohio, a son; and Robert J. Lovett of Amboy, a grandson. The will provides that a suitable memorial be erected in the family burial lot at Bessemer, Ala., at a cost not to exceed $500. Gordon Lovett is named executor and the instrument provides that he shall operate a farm located in Lee county, the proceeds to be divided in three parts, one-third to the daughter, Mary Emig of Detroit; one third to a grandson, Robert J. Lovett of Ashton; and a third to be divided equally between Joseph and Gordon, sons of Amboy.

TEN YEAR CONTRACT

Bloomington, Ind., March 30.—(AP)—Z. G. Clevenger, athletic director at Indiana University, announced today that A. N. (Bo) McMillin had signed a new ten-year contract as head football coach at Indiana. McMillin now is completing his third year at the local school.

LEE OFFICERS JOIN WAR ON FARM THIEVES

Sheriff and Deputy Quiz Prisoners in Putnam Co.

Sheriff Ward Miller and Deputy G. P. Finch went to Hennepin, Putnam county, yesterday afternoon to see a prisoner who gives the name of Clarence Wells of Candon, Ill., a hitch-hiker, arrested early yesterday morning by Sheriff Lawrence Ellena of Putnam county. They also visited St. Margaret's hospital at Spring Valley, where they viewed a second prisoner, known only as "Cannon," who is unconscious and closely guarded. The latter was shot through the head in a battle in the sheriff's residence section of the Putnam county jail Monday morning about 4 o'clock and Sheriff Ellena attributes the fact that he is alive today to the assistance which his wife gave when she came to his rescue after he had been knocked down repeatedly by his much heavier and infuriated prisoner.

Sheriff Ellena and wife are very well known in Dixon, having visited here on numerous occasions. Mrs. Leo Wolfe of this city is a sister of Mrs. Ellena.

Gives Credit to Wife

"I would not be here to tell about it had it not been for my wife," the diminutive but plucky Putnam county sheriff told the Lee county officers yesterday afternoon. "She held onto his arms when he tried to take my revolver from my overcoat pocket and in this way, I was able to take the single shot at him, which was enough."

The prisoner in the Putnam county jail pays no heed to questions directed at him by officers. He only sneers when questioned and evades any direct answers.

The two men were arrested about 3:30 yesterday morning at a point east of Hennepin where nine bags of clover seed, which had been stolen from the barn of a nearby farm, were cached along a hedge. Sheriff Ellena and a citizen of Hennepin had laid in a straw stack since before midnight Sunday waiting for the thieves, and only after a chase of a mile were the officers able to halt the car. The strangers were taken before they had an opportunity to load the sacks of seed.

Turned on Officer

At the county jail at Hennepin, Ellena took the elder of the two prisoners into the jail, leaving his assistant and the other prisoner in the car to await his return. It was when the sheriff attempted to place the prisoner in the cell block that the latter suddenly turned, struck the sheriff in the face breaking his nose and felling him in the living room of the sheriff's residence. The sheriff was beaten about the head and for about 20 minutes the two men fought savagely for possession of the sheriff's revolver, a 45 automatic. Mrs. Ellena was awakened by the scuffling, as was their daughter, and they came downstairs to the living room, where she was finally able to be of assistance to her husband, who fired one shot from his revolver which struck the prisoner in the right side of the head, crashed through the skull

He Predicted Drought

DR. SELBY MAXWELL

The man who predicted the drought and floods of 1936 has been added to the staff of the Dixon Evening Telegraph, and starting next Saturday his weekly feature "NEXT WEEK'S WEATHER" will be presented in this paper.

The Maxwell Method of Short and Long Range Weather Forecast has been acclaimed the most accurate ever achieved. Men, women, children, everyone plans each day according to the weather. "NEXT WEEK'S WEATHER," a new Telegraph feature, will tell and show you what's going to happen each day one week in advance. You'll want to start reading Dr. Maxwell's forecasts next Saturday.

Joliet "Lochinvar" Won Wife After Three-Month Wait and Much Activity

Habeas Corpus and Assault Charges are Dropped

Joliet, Ill., March 30.—(AP)—Linus "Lochinvar" Rehberg, 23, won his wife today after a three-month wait and much hospital and court action.

His rough-riding romance reached its climax December 20 when he eloped to Crown Point, Ind., with Lorraine Hossbach, 18, driving his car over Lorraine's mother, Mrs. Victoria Hossbach, 42.

The mother, who just before had ordered Linus from her home, was confined several days in a hospital where 75 stitches were taken to mend her wounds. She charged her new son-in-law with intent to kill but he was released on $5,000 bond upon his return from the honeymoon.

Rehberg charged that Lorraine's parents took advantage of the short time he spent in jail before his release and took his bride to their home and imprisoned her.

So today Lorraine and her parents were hailed into county court on a writ of habeas corpus. Judge Edwin L. Wilson said, "This is a case for the girl to decide; not me."

He talked individually with Lorraine and "Lochinvar" and the two newly-weds strode from the court room arm in arm, bound for the new home in Monee which Linus had furnished.

The habeas corpus writ and the assault charge against the bridegroom were dropped in the interests of peace in the family.

New German Envoy Succeeds Luther

Berlin, March 30.—(AP)—Appointment of Dr. Hans H. Dieckhoff as ambassador to Washington to succeed Dr. Hans Luther was officially announced today.

Dr. Dieckhoff, former counselor of the London embassy and more recently in charge of the American section of the foreign office here, hoped to assume his new post some time in May.

PATRONAGE

Democratic Senator Says Whip Is Now Being Cracked

Washington, March 30.—(AP)—(AP)—The Justice Department expressed regret today that Senator Holt (D-WVa.) had interpreted its action in a judicial appointment as a use of patronage to gain support for President Roosevelt's court bill.

Holt charged in the senate yesterday that after months of ignoring him on patronage, the administration had asked his views on naming a new federal judge for West Virginia, Joseph B. Keenan, Assistant Attorney General, was the official who consulted him, Holt said.

"He didn't say he was going to give me a judgeship for my vote, but he meant it if I went along I would get that," the senator told his colleagues.

Keenan, said his Justice Department office, said he had discussed with Holt's stenographer "a nomination to fill the vacancy existing in the federal court in West Virginia," thus extending a courtesy "as old as the department itself."

Holt's charges were made in the course of a long senate argument on the Supreme Court question, during which Senator Burton K. Wheeler (D-Mont.) assailed the patronage activities of the administration and said that Roosevelt and Attorney General Homer S. Cummings had assumed "the attitude of petty-fogging lawyers" in condemning the Supreme Court.

"So far as all this talk about patronage is concerned, let those who say it prove it," demanded Senator Hugo L. Black (D-Ala.). "Let those who charged that there is an effort made to buy a senator or a congressman by patronage, prove it."

"I will tell the senator," Holt replied. "An official in the department of justice—Judge Keenan, he very generously wanted to know if I was interested in suggesting someone for federal judge in West Virginia. He talked about the present administration. He did not say, 'I am going to give you a judge for your vote.' I hope he did not think I was that dumb. But I know what he meant and he knew what I meant. He meant if I went along, I would get a judge."

"Knowing the department of justice group as I do, I had the conversation on the telephone taken down—both ends of it."

Funeral of Mrs. Murphy on Monday

The funeral of Mrs. Ellen F. Murphy was held Monday morning at 9:30 from St. Patrick's Catholic church. Solemn high mass was celebrated by Rev. Fr. T. L. Walsh, celebrant; Rev. James D. Burke, deacon, and Rev. C. W. Caine, sub-deacon. The eulogy was given by Rev. Fr. T. L. Walsh.

"Thou art fair, oh holy one of my beloved, there is not a spot within thee," was his subject in comparing the beautiful character of the deceased to our Blessed Mother. Sorrows and trials of motherhood, the giving up of a beloved son, borne for love of Him who sent those crosses won for them the everlasting crown of glory.

Those attending the funeral from out of town were: Mr. and Mrs. Michael Prindaville, Memphis, Tenn.; Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Prindaville, Mr. and Mrs. Orville Drew and daughter Jane and Richard O'Connor, Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. Orville Murphy, Frank Fitzhenry, Carroll, Iowa, and James Murphy of Lohrville, Iowa.

Wooden Leg Story

Dotyville, Wis., March 30.—(AP)—Jack Brown was knocked unconscious by his wooden leg.

The heavy tailgate on his livestock truck fell down, breaking his wooden leg. A fragment was sent flying into the air. It came down on Brown's head, felling him.

FEATURES TO BE PUBLISHED IN THIS PAPER

Interest of Every Reader Will Be Increased

The Evening Telegraph has some improvements to offer our readers which will certainly increase the importance and value of this newspaper to them.

We have been offered a number of features that, in our opinion, are much more interesting than some we have been using and we propose, in the near future, to give space in The Telegraph to these new features and to eliminate, perhaps, some few features which we believe are of little interest.

Two new adventure strips, in pictures, will soon appear in these columns. They will have an absorbing interest to readers, young and old. Announcement will be made when they are to appear.

A comic strip which will carry great appeal to any devotee of baseball, football, basketball, racing, wrestling, boxing or any sort of sport, will appear on our sporting page and it will offer a lot of real humor.

Did you ever hear of Rube Appleberry, or Buck Rogers, or Sky Roads with "Speed McCloud" and his airplane club for boys? You will. Right soon. And you'll like them.

"Brain Twizzlers"

"Brain Twizzlers" in another interesting item soon to engage your attention and provide enjoyment for you in The Telegraph. We'll tell you more about it later.

Another great feature which we plan to offer our readers is "Let's Explore Your Mind" by Albert Edvard Wiggam, D. Sc. You've heard of Dr. Wiggam, famous author, lecturer and philosopher. His daily articles, which will start as soon as is possible under our contract with him, will engage your interest, stimulate your thinking apparatus and make you look for and read his article every evening. We will tell you more about that later also.

You are going to have a greater interest in your Telegraph from now on.

And perhaps the most valuable and useful and absorbing feature we plan to offer you is a new and far more reaching weather forecast than you have ever seen or heard of before!

Weather Forecast

AN EIGHT DAY FORECAST OF TEMPERATURE AND PRECIPITATION THAT IS UNUSUALLY ACCURATE. We do not claim that it is absolutely correct any more than we do of the U. S. government forecast which we print each evening. The government forecast is the best summary that their experts can give us after surveying the weather maps of all the continent.

We claim an even more accurate forecast of our local weather conditions for a week ahead. And we invite your investigation and check on our prognostications. We are especially want to know what tonight and tomorrow will do. But what is going to happen during the rest of the week as regards sunshine and rain and cold blasts or blizzards or soft and balmy breezes is intensely interesting to all of us.

The farmer will be glad to learn what the weather will be a few

DAILY HEALTH
By DR. IAGO GLADSTON
The Child's Posture
The child's posture is influenced by numerous conditions. Among these are body type, body proportions, muscle tone, nutrition, fatigue, eye function, hearing and bodily disabilities.

Despite this, however, the temptation appears to be irresistible to nag the child who has poor posture with injunctions to draw back its shoulders, pull in its abdomen, lift its head, etc. Just as commonly the child is put through exercise drills and may even be loaded with shoulder braces and other mechanical contrivances. This attack is direct, but seldom effective.

Let us assume that the child's bad posture is due to fatigue. What such a child may need is more rest, rather than more exercise.

Even in this instance the fatigue may not be due to a lack of rest, but to some low-grade chronic infectious process, such as diseased tonsils, abscessed teeth or a sinus infection. In such condition, additional rest may help somewhat, but the chronic fatigue could not be relieved until the infectious process is cured.

A near-sighted child is likely to push its head forward and thus throw its posture out of normal relation. A malnourished child, one that is anemic or suffering from rickets, may have a poor muscle tone. Such a child literally lacks the strength with which to hold up its body.

If the child hears best in one ear, it is likely to turn its head to one side. Congenital defects involving the hip joints, and other orthopedic defects, are palpable causes of bad posture.

A child suffering from poor posture should be given a thorough physical examination. Its daily habits, hygienic and otherwise, should be scrutinized carefully.

Does the child read and study in proper light? Does it carry its books to and from school in one hand? Does it sit and work in a suitable chair and at a properly adjusted table or desk? Does it have enough physical exercise out of doors, or does it overdo?

When such a study of the child has been completed, it may be desirable to institute treatment by means of corrective exercises. These should be carefully prescribed and should be scrupulously administered. Haphazard exercises are worse than none.

Most of all, one should be on guard against stigmatizing the child with its bad posture, and nagging it to stand erect.

Tomorrow—Rubbing It In

State Hospital

By "Uncle Bud"

Our remarks about timing a couple that stood and chatted on the cross walk between the office and the old employees' home for an hour and forty-five minutes Saturday evening must have been noticed by them. At any rate last evening they did their chatting in a car parked near the cross walk.

After two hours and a half therein by the clock they finally emerged to join a detail being organized to search for three missing girl patients.

The regular weekly dance sponsored by the recreation department for patients was held at the amusement hall last night. As usual it was greatly enjoyed by the patients who attended it.

Miss Rose Whipp, chief nurse, who has been off duty the past few days returned to duty yesterday.

Day Policeman Walter Sharkey who has been off duty returns to duty today.

Neva Ebersoll who is doing post-graduate work in one of the Chicago hospitals visited here yesterday.

Lawrence "Jerry" Gorman denied a report current on the grounds last evening that he and Henry Hamblock had secured a contract to furnish Hartz Mountain canaries to the British government for use during the approaching coronation of King George VI. Both Gorman and Hamblock are known to be bird lovers and to the possession of several fine specimens each.

Richard "Cardinal" Hoban is receiving daily treatments from a member of the staff for a sore shoulder. From a source believed to be reliable, we learn that Dick's injured shoulder is the aftermath of that battle he had with Prosperina the monster hoot owl in the corn field last summer. Dick denies this, asserting the injuries came as a result of not giving proper attention to some scratches he received in his daily work.

We understand we may look for Alva Krider and Fred Barnhizer to don their straw hats any day now. This by common consent will signalize the advent of the spring season.

We regret to learn that Patrick Hennessey, head detail boss is seriously ill at his home in Dixon with what is feared may be pneumonia. We earnestly trust this does not prove to be so and that "Pat" may be speedily restored to us.

In a chat with Charles Hampton last evening, we were pleased to learn that he feels considerably improved as a result of his recent visit to the Mayo clinic at Rochester, Minn.

Officials for the forthcoming battle between Albert Linker, defending champion, and Night Policeman J. Cianfone for the title of champion prevaricator of the Sun Dodgers was announced last night as Referee, President Frank Pikel of the Laborator Seals; Timer, Paul Hepper; Board of Judges, Andrew Gannon, Florian Cieslitski, and Harry Powell; announcer, President Tony Guzzardo of the Polar Bear club. No decision has yet been announced as to the date or place of the bout or whether it will be open to the public.

Mrs. Ella Hutchinson, housekeeper, and Mrs. Jennie Jordan are visiting at their homes in Lawrence county. They plan to return to duty, Sunday, April 3.

Mrs. Theresa McMahon is on the sick list with an eye infection.

Head Gardener R. Van Matre is busily engaged in getting the garden ready for spring planting.

CAT HAS PRIVATE BELL.
Arkansas City, Kas.—(AP)—Fritzie, a cat owned by Miss Lucille Rucker, has learned how to get what he wants. He simply rings a bell near the door whenever he's hungry, wants to go out of the house or demands attention in general.

Legislature

Today's Activities In Illinois Assembly Briefly Told

Springfield, Ill., Mar. 30—(AP)—Without opposition, the House voted today to put all of Cook county under the permanent registration of voters. The roll call was 126 to 0 in sending to the Senate the series of bills by Emmett McGrath, Brookfield Democrat.

Under the 1936 law, Cook county permanent registration was limited to the jurisdiction of the Chicago election commission, which took in a few of the suburbs.

The legislature has taken no action on bills to extend downstate permanent registration to municipalities not having election commissions.

The House concurred in Senate amendments to the David Hunter bill authorizing non-high school district bonds.

The Wilson bill abolishing the food standard commission in the department of agriculture was sent to the Senate, along with an appropriation of $1,500 for repairing the Illinois Firemen's Association drill tower at Urbana.

A bill by Senator Harold G. Ward appropriating $45,000 for the cost of the inauguration of Democratic state officials in January was signed yesterday by Governor Horner.

Anticipating no decrease in demands for relief financing, the Horner administration started action today to keep the retail sales tax at three per cent for two more years.

Bills introduced in the House before the legislature's special revenue committee could organize would retain the three per cent rate until July 1, 1939.

Emergency action is necessary or else the third cent on the sales tax, used in financing relief, will automatically be dropped on May 1.

Benjamin S. Adamowski of Chicago, administration leader, introduced the sales tax extension program in the House last night. There was no comment from either party.

Another Adamowski bill took the first step in Treasurer John C. Martin's program to abolish the Illinois Emergency Relief Commission, of which he is chairman, and centralize all relief activities in the department of public welfare.

It would extend the life of the IERC for one month, until July 1.

Then, under Martin-administration bills still to be introduced, the transfer of authority to the code departmental set-up would be made.

Silent at the time, Republican leaders were expected to vote for the sales tax extension when the bills come out of the revenue committee. The third cent on the sales tax, added after long deadlines in 1935, is being used exclusively for relief and was extended without objection last autumn.

Senator James O. Monroe of Collinsville meanwhile hoped the special committee could start its study of the revenue problem. Speaker Louie E. Lewis postponed overnight the naming of the five House members.

The house debated for hours today about how much of a cut to make in the $9,000,000 peg levy tax bill for the Chicago park district.

Rep. Edward J. McCabe, Cook county's chief deputy assessor, moved that the tax be pegged at $7,200,000 a year.

As a substitute, Benjamin S. Adamowski, Democratic leader, proposed that the figure be put at $7,600,000, saying that much is needed although Governor Horner indicated he would veto anything more than $7,000,000.

In a general discussion of the property tax situation, Adamowski said:

"The people of Chicago are becoming educated to the proposition that when you don't pay your taxes, nothing happens."

Joseph L. Rategan, who defended the bill's $9,000,000 figure as it passed the senate, said the Chicago consolidated park district has resulted in economy.

Rep. Charles H. Weber, Chicago Democrat, introduced a bill today to prohibit persons of 70 from holding elective office in political subdivisions of the state.

If enacted, it would vacate the offices of Mayor E. N. Woodruff of Peoria and other veterans of more than 70.

The Weber bill, which did not apply to state officials, would prohibit persons of 70 from running for office and would vacate the offices of those who reach 70.

Southern Illinois State Normal University at Carbondale would be a branch of the University of Illinois under a bill by Calvin D. Johnson, Belleville Republican, and Sidney Parker, Texico Democrat. Management would be transferred to the University trustees.

Rep. Edward J. McCabe, Chicago Democrat, introduced bills to provide for assessment by the tax commission of foreign and alien corporations.

Mother Deranged When She Choked Three Children

Aurora, Ill., March 30—(AP)—A coroner's jury decided yesterday that Mrs. Jeanette Martin strangled her three children and hanged herself while temporarily deranged on Easter Sunday.

The bodies of Mrs. Martin and the girls, Betty Jean, 3; Olga Jeanette, 2, and Joan, three months old, were found in the home several hours after they had returned from church.

A note written by Mrs. Martin told of her grief over "neglect" by her estranged husband, John, reported somewhere in the southwest seeking employment.

Bloomington Boys Killed By Autos

Bloomington, Ill., March 30—(AP)—Two boys were dead today, struck by automobiles.

Richard Alexander, 5, was hit by a car police said was driven by Earl Ziegler, a township highway commissioner. They said he reported the boy darted in front of his machine.

William Bybee, 11, was injured fatally when he ran into a street to retrieve his hat, tossed playfully by a companion. Robert Campbell of Danvers, driver of the car, escaped serious injury when the auto turned over three times as he sought to avoid the boy.

5-MASTER STILL IN USE.
Charleston, S. C.—(AP)—The Edna Hoyt, said to be the last of the five-masted schooners, is still engaged in Atlantic coastwise trade.

BUT, THERE'S THE MANDATE

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, Michigan republican has begun agitation in the senate in favor of a pay-as-you-go plan in administration of the social security act.

Some readers may have a hazy recollection of something of the kind that was suggested late last summer by a man named London or Lowdown or London or something like that. Anyhow, he was from Kansas.

But, there's the mandate!

We are being told on every hand about the mandate given President Roosevelt by the people last November. The issue about the social security funds was raised clearly, and it was defeated in the election.

The mandate now is, as given to the president, that the pay-as-you-go plan is discredited; that the present plan is approved; that the government shall continue to collect the taxes from the workers' pay envelopes and place them in a fund; that the government shall take the money out of the fund in exchange for an I. O. U.; that the government then shall spend the money for current expenses; that it shall continue so to do until the indebtedness of the United States shall have reached 47 billions of dollars, or about 12 billions more than it is now, leaving a fund of I. O. U.s
to pay the obligation.

That is what the administration was doing when the issue was raised in the campaign. That is what it is doing now. That is what the voters gave Roosevelt the mandate to continue.

Who wants to pay as he goes, when something else can be used for money?

And, there's the mandate!

ENGLAND TAKES STEPS

For some time the British government has been tampering with the Nile river, which previously had dominated Egyptian farming plans. For uncounted centuries the Nile had flooded a comparatively wide strip on each side of itself, watering and fertilizing the land at the same time. The flooding process took place following the rainy season in the highlands.

Now a system of dams has been constructed so that the water is held back at the normal flood time, and the land is watered when water is most needed.

Of course the rich silt is no longer permitted to settle on the soil, and Egyptian farmers must buy fertilizer, but other advantages of the plan are expected to offset this expense.

Egypt produces very fine cotton. In the past Great Britain has purchased much cotton from the United States, but there seems to be a determination to get free of dependence upon the American supply.

England will want cotton in case of another war,
and our neutrality bills have created a scare.

OIL STORES TERMED AMPLE

Information from the oil industry is that oil reserves remain satisfactory; that known underground sources are tremendous, and that in all probability more fields, in America and other countries, will be developed.
It will be remembered that shortly after the World War some one surveyed the situation and predicted that within twelve years oil would become so scarce as to affect the automobile business seriously. Since that time the oil "in sight" has increased, rather than decreased, and the motor car industry has attained heights unimagined even in 1920. Probably no one, not even the most disinterested geologist, would be willing to make an estimate as to the probable time when we shall need substitutes for oil and gasoline.

The beginning of the oil business in the United States makes an interesting story. The first well was brought in at Titusville, Pa., by Edwin Drake seventy-seven years ago. Up to the middle of the last century it had been customary to extract oil for the lamps of America from whales. The whaling industry was enormously important but unfortunately whales were becoming scarce.

Although Drake drilled the first oil well in 1859, petroleum had been known for centuries. The substance had been distilled from shale in Scotland and skimmed from lakes in various parts of the world. It had been skimmed from water by the American Indians who believed it had medicinal properties, and even as Drake operated it was being sold in drugstores. It also was used in lamps to a limited extent.

Drake got the idea for his derrick by watching the drilling of a salt well. A windmill was used as motive power for the Drake drill, but attempts to crib the sides of the hole failed. So Drake sank an iron pipe.
On Saturday, Aug. 27, 1859, the pipe dropped about 6 inches into a crevice before workmen in charge of William B. Smith, Drake's foreman, went home in the evening. The next morning Smith went to the well and was surprised to see the iron pipe filled with petroleum to within a few feet of the top.

On Monday morning a pump was installed and the well began producing about fifteen barrels a day.

Now that Drake had his well, no one was certain what use to make of the oil. In such enormous quanties as fifteen barrels a day it was a drug on the apothecary's market, but uses quickly became apparent.
Drake sold his leases for about 2 million dollars, although later the same rights were transferred for 90
millions.

In the distillation of the oil one of the byproducts was gasoline, and this caused the distillers no end of trouble. It could not be used in lamps on account of its explosive nature, and as a lubricant it was worthless. People complained when the gasoline was dumped into streams, and finally the distillers ran it into pits in the ground and set fire to it. Kerosene was the chief product for years and gasoline was a nuisance. Today, when a possible shortage of oil is mentioned, we think little about kerosene, but of the gasoline needed for automobiles.

Nepotism

Whether you call it nepotism or just filial devotion, more and more senators are keeping jobs within their own families. Here are some of the senatorial secretaries:

Hollis O. Black is secretary to Senator Hugo Black of Alabama;
William J. Bulow, Jr., to Senator
Bulow of South Dakota; Donald
W. McKellar to Senator McKellar of Tennessee; Paul Townsend to Senator Townsend of Delaware;
Arthur H. Vandenberg, Jr., to Senator Vandenberg of Michigan.

Among the Senate daughters, the following are members of their fathers' office staffs:

Miss Kay Overton, daughter of Senator Overton of Louisiana;
Mrs. Esther Thomas Grover, daughter of Senator Thomas of Utah; Mrs. Ruth Dieterich Kaltoff, daughter of Senator Dieterich of Illinois.

The secretary of the Vice President is Elsie Rheiner Garner, wife of John Nance Garner.

Salaries range from $1,800 for clerks to $3,900 for secretaries.

Note—Many of the above are hard workers, Mrs. Garner being among the most conscientious.

Merry-Go-Round

Stanley High, of Good Neighbor league fame, is writing more articles for The Saturday Evening Post, much against the will of the White House, which rebuffed him severely for his last one. . . . Senator McAdoo of California omits from his congressional biography any reference to marriage. His present wife is his third. The first Mrs. McAdoo, nee Sarah H. Fleming, died in 1912. In 1914 McAdoo married Eleanor R. Wilson, daughter of Woodrow Wilson. The second Mrs. McAdoo is still living. . . .

Good Neighbor item in recent department of commerce release:
"Venezuela buys almost all her breakfast foods from the United States" . . . Congressman Ed Isaac of San Diego, Calif., wants it understood that his name is not pronounced as it looks. Proper pronunciation is E-xack. . . . The United States imported nearly 10 million harmonicas last year. Over seven million of them came from Germany.

HOLD COLLEGE DEGREES

Washington.—(AP)—The average American adult is just a grade school boy as far as formal education is concerned, statistics of the United States office of education indicate.

Emery M. Foster, chief of the division of statistics, says that less than 3 per cent of those past voting have finished college and that 43.58 per cent merely have
"some elementary school work."
High school graduates constitute only 6.85 per cent of the persons over 21 years of age.

STRIKE THREAT IN COAL FIELDS OF STATE WANES

Union Miners Promise To Work Until New Pact Is Signed

Springfield, March 30.—(AP)—A threat of strike in the Illinois coal fields subsided today on the strength of assurances from one group of union miners would continue under the present contract, which expires tomorrow, until a new agreement was reached on hours and wages.

President Joe Ozanic of the Progressive Miners of America said last night that although his union and the coal producers association had as yet been unable to agree on basic terms of a new contract, he would not issue a strike call as he previously had said he would.

Conferences between the miners' scale committee and the producers will be resumed today.

The conferees were said by informed sources to be watching developments in the New York conference of eastern soft coal operators and the United Mine Workers of America.

If members of both the Progressive union and the Illinois branch of the U. M. W. A. were to strike it would tie up the entire Illinois bituminous industry.

STRIKE THREAT

New York, March 30.—(AP)—The threat of an almost nationwide soft coal strike hung over booming industry today with wage and hour negotiations between miners and operators still deadlocked.

Only those mines worked by the Progressive Miners of America in Illinois and a few scattered non-union mines elsewhere will operate Friday unless the United Mine Workers and Appalachian producers sign a new contract or extend the present one before-hand.

The present agreement expires tomorrow at midnight, but Thursday is a miners' holiday to celebrate the anniversary of the eight-hour day.

Negotiations, started Feb. 17, now are in the hands of a joint committee of miners and operators.

The committee was slated to hold only a brief meeting today because John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, and other union officials were to attend a dinner tonight in Harrisburg, Pa., in honor of Thomas Kennedy, Pennsylvania's lieutenant governor and secretary-treasurer of the union.

Experiments

Dixon Doctors Tell of Treatments of Disease

Dr. W.A. Nichols of Dixon today received recognition for valuable information derived from scientific experimentation on remedies designed to cure Vincent's disease.

An editorial in the Chicago American dealing with the subject states:

Two hundred and fifty years ago a man was experimenting with a lens he made which magnified tiny things too small for the naked eye to see. He was the famous A. van Leeuwenhoek, who discovered the microscope. One of the first things he told about in this new microscopic world was a tiny, curved, living object that he saw moving around under the microscope.

He found it in examining some material taken from the mouth of one of his neighbors. Today we are very familiar with this tiny living object that Leeuwenhoek saw. We now know it is a germ which causes a serious disease of the gums and mouth called Vincent's stomatitis (sto-mat-i-tis).

Drs. G. W. Farrell and W. A. McNichols of Dixon, Ill. have recently studied 794 persons who were attacked by this disease in an outbreak in an institution. They recorded that those who suffered from Vincent's disease had pain, swelling of the gums and bad odor of the breath. It was found when they pulled off the gray membrane covering the gums that the gums would bleed very heavily. They also found ulcers on the gums and on the lining membrane of the cheeks.

Most of the people sick with Vincent's disease were listless and irritable and showed loss of appetite. In some cases the infection attacked the larynx or voice box and the trachea or windpipe, even leading in a few cases to bronchopneumonia and abscesses of the lungs.

Drs. Farrell and McNichols tried a variety of treatments which had been used by others. One of these treatments was injections of arsenic into the veins, but they found it had little value in curbing the disease.

Now these same doctors knew that this germ which causes Vincent's disease could not live where there was air or oxygen present. In other words, it was one of that group of germs which live only where there is no air or oxygen, just as does the germ that causes lockjaw. So they tried to find some substance which would produce oxygen and in that way kill the germs. Such a substance is hydrogen peroxide.

Drs. Farrell and McNichols made a mixture of an arsenic preparation and hydrogen peroxide which they had the patient use as a gargle. This gargle gave excellent results in curing the disease. The mixture was used by them as frequently as was practical. In general, they found that to gargle four times a day or more was sufficient to clear up the disease.

They tried a number of other substances, such as a mixture of the arsenic preparation and glycerine, tincture of benzoin, aconite, iodine and chloroform. None of these materials gave as good results as the arsenic preparation and hydrogen peroxide gargle.

The doctors made some other very important suggestions to keep the disease from returning. They emphasized that the tartar on the teeth should be thoroughly cleaned off by the dentist and any condition which caused irritation in the mouth removed, such as badly fitting bridge, or a sharp edge on a tooth.

They also suggested that smoking and the use of alcoholic beverages are not advisable for a person suffering from Vincent's infection.

Just as in many other diseases, the longer this infection is allowed to continue without treatment the worse it becomes and the harder it is to clear up. If doctors find that this mixture of the arsenic preparation and hydrogen peroxide continues to cure Vincent's disease of the gums, medical science will be credited with another advance.

EAST INLET

East Inlet—Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Fern E. Clarke, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Clarke of Amboy, and Alfred E. Mueller, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Mueller of Sublette.

The ceremony took place Sunday, Jan. 21, at St. Paul's Lutheran parsonage at Rockford, with Rev. Mr. Brown officiating. The single ring ceremony was used.

The bride was attired in a Royal blue satin dress with silver accessories and carried a bouquet of pink sweet peas and baby's breath.

Miss Mary Farley of Harperia, Ia., a close friend, was bridesmaid and wore a navy blue dress with gray accessories.

Clarence Ramsey of Centerville, Ia., a close friend of the groom, was best man. Both the groom and best man were dressed in oxford gray suits.

Mrs. Mueller received her education in rural schools at West Brooklyn and attended Amboy high school. She later was employed at Angears hospital and then went to Rockford where she has been employed for the last year and a half.

After the ceremony the bridal group enjoyed a lovely dinner at the cafe.

Mr. Mueller received his education at Sublette, and helped his father farm for several years. He

MILLIONS

Added Daily to Value of Wheat Crop of United States

Chicago, March 30.—(AP)—With a billion dollar 1937 wheat harvest now a possibility, American farmers for the first time in years are watching crop conditions improve steadily without paying a sacrifice in lower prices, grain traders said today.

Each day is adding millions of dollars to the value of the wheat crop, they said, because of two factors—increasing prices and better growing conditions.

Ordinarily, market authorities said, one factor would tend to offset the other. But unusual conditions have brought about a situation in which the increasing 1937 crop prospect has gone hand in hand with an increasing demand prospect.

Snow blanketing the dust bowl and beneficial moisture in other sections of the wheat belt have enlarged the potential domestic crop, traders said, but the growing demand of importing European nations has dominated the wheat market in recent weeks.

World wheat prices have risen much faster than domestic values, a favorable condition for the re-entry of the United States into world export trade after four seasons as an importer.

Improved crop conditions have held the advance of wheat prices in check, traders said, but the market has been rising steadily in the past month nevertheless. The price of wheat deliveries in July in Chicago has gained from $1.15 a bushel on the first of March to $1.28, yesterday, an appreciation of 13 cents.

has been employed at the General wood factory at Rockford for the past year and a half.

Mr. and Mrs. Mueller will make their home in Rockford for the present.

Mr. and Mrs. William Rabel and family and Mr. and Mrs. James Boyle were Amboy shoppers Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Clarke entertained the following Easter Sunday: Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Mueller of Rockford, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Clarke, Jr., Dick Jacobs, of Paw Paw, Miss Blanche Clarke of Sublette.

WINTER MILK IS NOT NUTRITIOUS AS SUMMER MILK

Can't Determine Real Reason For This Deficiency

Madison, Wis., March 30.—(AP)—Northern dairy farmers, concerned over possible loss of markets to southern farmers since scientists announced discovery that milk produced in winter is not as nutritious as summer milk, University of Wisconsin experiments sought to find methods of improving winter milk.

Just what mysterious element is missing in winter milk has not been determined by university scientists, but they have learned summer milk contains a growth-promoting factor, lacking in the other, which they believe comes from green grass eaten by cows and lost when grass is dry-cured into hay.

Wisconsin scientists, seeking to corner the elusive element, said some progress has been made and that experiments in feeding special rations to cows are going forward as rapidly as possible.

Growth Producing Factor
By feeding alfalfa silage treated with equal parts of hydrochloric and sulphuric acid to prevent fermentation, the growth producing factor appeared in the milk. Rats fed this milk grew twice as fast as rats fed the same amount of ordinary winter milk. Drs. E. B. Hart and C. A. Elvehjem discovered. The acid treatment, discovered by a Danish scientist, is patented, however, and is not yet available for

Stomach Gas So Bad Seems To Hurt Heart

"The gas on my stomach was so bad I could not eat or sleep. Even my heart seemed to hurt. A friend suggested Adlerika. The first dose I took brought me relief. Now I eat as I wish, sleep fine and never feel better."

—Mrs. Jas. Filler.
Adlerika acts on BOTH upper and lower bowels while ordinary laxatives act on the lower bowel only. Adlerika gives your system a thorough cleansing, bringing out old, poisonous matter that you would not believe was in your system and that has been causing gas pains, sour stomach, nervousness and headaches for months.

—Dr. H. L. Shoup, New York, reports:
"In addition to intestinal cleansing, Adlerika greatly reduces bacteria and colon bacilli." Give your bowels a REAL cleansing with Adlerika and see how good you feel. Just one spoonful relieves GAS and stubborn constipation.

use by dairymen in this country. Another method which improves the quality of winter milk, it was discovered, resulted from feeding cows alfalfa silage which had been treated with molasses, 50 to 75 pounds to each ton of hay as it was placed in the silo.

Drs. Hart and Elvehjem found that by adding brain and liver substance to winter milk rations it stimulated growth in experimental animals.

WILL HOGS EAT HAY? YES, AND

SOFT COAL, TOO
Columbia, Mo.—(AP)—Do hogs eat hay? Professor L. A. Weaver of the Missouri College of Agriculture says he would like to settle the question once and for all that they do.

The animal husbandry professor explains the hogs may act snooty at times, however, and demand that nice leafy legume hay be chipped up for them before they eat it.

"Legume hay is an essential part of feeding hogs, especially if they are fastened up in a dry pen," Professor Weaver says.

"And while on the subject," he adds, "raisers should throw in hog rations a quantity of bone meal and sal. It supplies phosphorus and calcium."

"When hogs don't get these valuable substances they sometimes eat soft coal. There's no excuse for hogs to eat good bituminous coal."

Japan's largest recorded rice crop was produced in 1933 and totaled 22,835,000,000 pounds.

Text of Speech by Sen. Glass, Veteran Democrat, Against Naming "Wet Nurses" For Justices of United States Supreme Court, Monday Evening

Washington, D. C., March 30—(Special)—Following is the text of the radio address made last night by Carter Glass of Virginia in opposition to the Supreme Court packing proposal:

"The speaker this evening is Carter Glass, senior senator of Virginia, in the congress of the United States. Never in my career until now have I ventured to debate before the public a measure pending in the senate and awaiting decision there; but the proponents of the problem to which I shall address myself tonight have seemed fearful of a deliberate consideration of the proposal to pack the Supreme Court of the United States; they have defiantly avowed their purpose to take the discussion into every forum, with the unaccounted intention of bringing pressure to bear on members of congress to submit obediently to the frightful suggestion which has come to them from the White House. The challenge has been accepted by those who oppose the reagent scheme to disrupt representative government in the nation; and the battle is on to the end.

Finds Scheme Without Parallel

"There has been some talk about 'organized propaganda' against this unashamed proposition to pack the Supreme Court for a specified purpose! Propaganda was first organized in behalf of the scheme right here in Washington and has proceeded with unabated fury from the White House fireside to nearly every rostrum in the country.

Raps "Unjurious Incendiaries"
"Political Janizaries, paid by the federal treasury to perform services here and charged with no official responsibility, for determining questions affecting the nation's judiciary, are parading the states in a desperate effort to influence the public against the Supreme court of the United States. One of these visionary incendiaries spoke recently in a southern state and exceeded all bounds of rational criticism in his vituperation of the eminent men who have served with great distinction on the Supreme bench.

"He is said to have been applauded by the audience of his partisans, which caused me to wonder if they could have known type of person to whose unrestrained abuse of the Supreme court and the great jurists who constitute its membership they approvingly listened. Did they know that he recently reproached the south for providing different public schools for the races; that he urged repeal of every statute and ordinance of segregation; that he virtually committed the administration at Washington to a new force bill for the south, declaring that not since Lincoln's day has it better been realized than now the necessity of laws to strictly enforce the constitution which kept the south in agony for years and retarded its progress for well nigh half a century?

Only One Aspect of Case
"This infuriated propagandist for degrading the Supreme court practically proposes another tragic era of reconstruction for the south. Should men of his mind have part in picking the six proposed judicial sycophants very likely they would be glad to see reversed those decisions of the court that saved the civilization of the south and in spite of the menace of passionate partisans, with their violent threats of 'reorganize' the court prohibited the seizure and confiscation, without pay, of the estates of private citizens. It was the Supreme court of the United States that validated the suffrage laws of the south which saved the section from anarchy and ruin in a period the unspeakable outrages of which nearly all the nation recalls with shame.

"This, however, is merely an incidental aspect of the case, reflecting my intense personal resentment and sharply revealing the sectional animosity of some of the fierce defamers of the Supreme court. Infinitely graver questions are presented. This entire nation is aroused over the many definite proposals to reverse the deliberate judgments of an independent court and to substitute for them the previously pledged opinions of judicial subalterns. With men of this undisguised radical type campaigning the country, and freely applying their wretched appropriations to the Supreme court, these who resist the shocking movement are imper-mentally reproached with 'organizing propaganda!'

Tells of Many Protests
"I challenge any proponents of this packing contrivance to examine the thousands upon thousands of personal letters and telegrams sent to me and find in them anything but individual indignation at the proposal to make an executive puppet of our supreme judicial tribunal. For myself, I think we should right now have 'organized propaganda'—in the sense that the men and women of America who value the liberties they have enjoyed for 150 years should, with unexampled spontaneity, exercise their constitutional right of petition and, with all the earnestness of their souls, protest to congress against this attempt to replace representative government with an autocracy.

"Aside from these observations, let us consider the glaring proposal of the White House to pack the Supreme court immediately with the President's own legal adherents for a specified purpose, and to enable him during his present term, even should there be not another, to entirely reconstitute the court with persons entertaining his extraordinary views of government.

Says Plan Without Precedent
"The attorney general in inaugurating 'organized propaganda' in behalf of the project undertook to identify the names of Washington, Jefferson, and other eminent Americans with expedient akin to the unprecedented proposal of the President. Already I have publicly pronounced the assertion an indefensible libel on the fame of these great men, and was glad to note that the attorney general omitted in his statement before the senate judiciary committee to repeat the aspersion. The White House proposal is without precedent in the history of American jurisprudence. Its consequences portend evils beyond the anxiety of any person concerned for a decent administration of justice in this country. There is a precedent, dating back to the infamous star chamber processes of Great Britain, to which I shall presently refer.

"George Washington, of course, was compelled to nominate a full Supreme court at the very beginning of our national life, but no reputable person charged then, or has ever believed since that Washington 'packed' the court with men pledged to any certain line of conduct beyond faithful compliance with the required oath to uphold the constitution in the sight of God, uninfluenced by the machinations of politicians or the self-interest of any groups of men intent on draining the federal treasury.

Praises First Appointees
"The men he selected for chief justices and associates were not only persons of eminence in the profession of the law, but in character literally incapable of going on the bench to submit obediently to executive decrees.

"I here and now challenge the proponents of this startling scheme to pack the Supreme Court for the avowed purpose of validating acts of congress already decided to be unconstitutional to produce one word written or spoken by Thomas Jefferson in advocacy of such a thing. If there ever was a public man who, aside from an unimpeachable character, could have been suspected of a desire to do such a frightful thing, it was Thomas Jefferson. He hated John Marshall, chief justice of the court, who was his kinsman, and Marshall hated Jefferson. The latter bitterly condemned Marshall's opinions. Recently emerged from under the tyranny of a mad king, Jeffersonians of the period dreaded the transformation of this republic into a monarchy.

"They suspected Marshall of a desire, if not the purpose, to do this 'step by step, insidiously, through judicial interpretations. They knew Alexander Hamilton, who was Marshall's powerful political associate, could well wish it to be done. Jefferson was incensed at the obituary in Marshall's famous opinion in the case of Marbury vs. Madison and other notable causes. Perpetually afterward he bitterly censured this and other opinions of Marshall. However, for six years after the delivery of Marshall's celebrated federalistic opinion, concurred in by the court, Thomas Jefferson was President of the United States, with full opportunity to propose reorganization of the Supreme Court to compel obedience to his views; but, with overwhelmingly supporting Congresses, never then or at any time in all his life would he have done such an abominable thing.

Quotes Woodrow Wilson
"Aside from his clear discernment of the vital importance of the checks and balances incorporated in the Constitution and his conception of judicial propriety, Jefferson never would have suggested such a thing for the reason subsequently stated with characteristic clarity and force by Woodrow Wilson when he said: 'It is within the undoubted constitutional power of Congress to overwhelm the opposition of the Supreme Court on any question by increasing the number of justices and refusing to confirm any appointments to the new places which do not promise to change the opinion of the court. But we do not think such a violation of the spirit of the Constitution is possible, simply because we share and contribute to that public opinion which makes such outrages upon constitutional morality impossible by standing ready to curse them.

"Standing ready to curse them! That vividly describes the attitude of thinking men and women everywhere in America today toward this hateful attempt to drive eminent jurists from the bench in order to crowd into the court a lot of judicial marionettes to speak the ventriloquisms of the White House.

Cites Wilson's Prophecy
"What Woodrow Wilson pungently described as an expedient to 'overwhelm the Supreme Court' by an outrage upon constitutional morality is, in my view, the exact thing now proposed, and it requires little astuteness to predict with confidence that the prophecy of Wilson would come true and the curses of the American people, in the end, would be visited upon those responsible for this device to deprave the Supreme Court and to make a political plaything of the Constitution of the United States.

"In like tenor with views entertained and frequently expressed by Woodrow Wilson were the profound convictions of another illustrious Democrat of the modern age. A practical student of government, a lover of his country, pre-eminent for courage and common sense, Grover Cleveland had a reverential regard for the Constitution and the courts. Nothing on the earth could have induced this stern patriot to lay impious hands upon either to say or do anything designed to inflame untrained public opinion against them.

Recalls Cleveland's Words
"Just prior to his second election to the presidency, Cleveland made a notable address at a centennial celebration of the Supreme Court. Reciting the sacrifices of the American people to be free and admonishing his hearers that the writers of the Constitution knew from bitter experience how readily instrumentalities of government were prone to trespass upon the liberties of the governed, Cleveland pointed out that, nevertheless, the founders of the republic 'calmly and deliberately established as a function of their government a check upon unauthorized freedom and a restraint upon dangerous liberty.' Said he, 'the attachment and allegiance of their states were warm and unflinching, but that did not prevent them from contributing a fraction of that sovereignty to the creation of a court which should guard and protect their new nation, and save and perpetuate a government which should, in all time to come, bless an independent people. Let us be glad in the possession of this rich heritage of American citizenship, and gratefully appreciate the wisdom and patriotism of those who gave to us the Supreme Court of the United States.'

"God Bless the Court"
"Telegram after telegram, letter after letter, sent me by the thousands, have said 'God bless the Supreme Court.' But who wants God to bless a packed Supreme Court? Who wants to invoke divine blessing on a court not constituted to put a check upon unauthorized freedom and restraint upon dangerous liberty, but reorganized to validate acts of congress in contravention of the Constitution as now interpreted and to expound the Constitution in subservient obedience to the whims or obsessions or misguided judgment of a President of the United States? Woodrow Wilson said such a court and those responsible for it would receive the curses of the American people. Grover Cleveland said the Supreme Court was created for no such sinister purpose.

"Our God still being in the heavens, it is my belief he would regard as unhalloved any invocation of his blessing on a court like that. We would better abolish the Supreme Court and, by the required process, do away outright with the Constitution if they are to be made the playthings of politicians.

Points to Admonition
"What did Cleveland mean by checks and balances against unauthorized freedom and dangerous liberty? He was uttering a monition against legislative or executive invasion of the rights of the states, reserved to them under the Constitution, and to be guarded and protected by the Supreme Court. He meant what a governor of a great state, afterward President of the United States, meant when seven years ago he made a vehement plea for respecting state rights and unparaphrasing legislative and regulatory bodies and special legislation. The governor warned that:

"To bring about government by oligarchy—masquerading as democracy—it is fundamentally essential that all authority and control be centralized in our national government. We are safe from the danger of any such departure from the principles on which this country was founded just so long as the individual home rule of the states is scrupulously preserved and fought for whenever they seem in danger."

Roosevelt in 1930
"This was Franklin D. Roosevelt in March, 1930. When before, may I venture to ask, in the history of the country has this nation more nearly approached the situation thus depicted? With federal regulatory bodies in every community of the states and federal bureaus in Washington bursting the bounds of marble palaces and overflowing into business houses and private homes, and the states required simply to submit their legislative statutes to the approval of bureaucratic boards here before they can get back a pittance of the prodigious sums picked from the pockets of their people in the form of taxes, state rights, as well as the security and independence of private enterprise, are fast disappearing.

"What does this court packing scheme signify if it does not reflect the fury of its proponents against the Supreme Court of the United States for certain of its recent decisions asserting the rights of the states and individuals and private business under the law and prohibiting the proposed invasion of these by ill digested congressional legislation, largely devised by inexperienced and incompetent academicians? That is precisely what it is all about.

Senses Purpose of Plan
"Had the judicial decisions sanctioned these rankly unconstitutional measures, who believes there would have been this unrestrained abuse of the court and this unprecedented attempt to flank the Constitution by putting on the bench six wet nurses to suckle the substance out of the opinions of jurists whose spirit of independence keeps pace with their profound knowledge of the law.

"That the purpose of the court project has accurately been stated by me is no longer in serious question. The president in his message to Congress implicitly conceded the proposition when he said if given legislative sanction for this irregular scheme there would be no necessity of appealing to the people so to amend their Constitution as to authorize the things for which the Supreme Court had said there is now no authority, as well, perhaps, as unmentioned schemes of 'unfettered' delegation of legislative power.

"That can mean nothing else than that it was then the executive determination to select six new judges who would validate acts of Congress already pronounced unconstitutional and contemplated acts of a similar kind.

"Every speech made since, whether at the fireside or elsewhere, has confirmed the interpretation of the President's message to Congress. If that, in plain terms, isn't 'packing the Supreme Court' for well defined purposes, I confess my inability to supply a better definition.

"Moreover, the advocates of the scheme themselves reveal this purpose—some of them warily enough to have produced merriment in the committee room, while others have bluntly, and with evident lack of shame, said outright that this is the ghastly object of the proceeding. Still others specify some of voided acts they propose to revive and render valid by the votes of the six new justices whom the country is assured will be selector for their 'bias.'

"One of these acts, which lost American farmers their export markets and necessitated the importation of foreign foodstuffs to feed our own people, was nullified by two-thirds of the Supreme Court; but by adding to the minority the six 'biased' votes to be packed onto the court, this decision may be overridden.

Recalls NRA Decision
"Another of the acts, voided by a unanimous vote of the Supreme Court and proposed to be revived for reversal, would severely test the persuasive powers and great legal attainments of the six 'biased' justices, since it is difficult for six votes to subvert nine, no matter what the disparity of ages. All nine Supreme Court justices threw out the so-called NRA as an 'unfettered' delegation of power, as it was an amazing thrust of federal jurisdiction into every conceivable private business of the country.

"Among its other vices it actually suspended for a period the laws of the nation against the depredations of monopoly and confided to executive discretion, under a hateful species of coercion, involving fines and imprisonment, the fate of every business interest in the United States. Its administration was confided to a man, long a respected friend of mine, of unsurpassed accomplishments, with no selfish interest whatsoever to subvert; but in circumstances he was as ruthless and harsh as human nature ever gets. The act and its administration created a reign of terror in the country; and everybody except the large industries, which profited by the enforced failure of the smaller, hailed the decision of the court with satisfaction.

Refers to Guffey Bill
"We are told this is to be revised along with the Guffey coal bill of somewhat a like nature, also declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court; and I am wondering if we are to witness the same sort of organized propaganda in their behalf as distinguished one oracle of the NRA, now prominently mentioned as one of the 'biased' wet nurses of the Supreme bench. In his first speech this man impudently denounced every American citizen as a 'slacker' who should not volunteer obedience to the NRA.

"He urged the women of the country to pin white feathers on every person who would not willingly co-operate with enforcement; thus he would have put a badge of disgrace on all men and women who would not submit to the atrocious exactions of an act of Congress which all nine judges of the Supreme Court, young and old alike, pronounced unconstitutional.

"The effrontery of this attempt to terrorize the people was in no degree abated by the fact that this valiant propagandist, now conspicuously pictured as one of the probable selections for the Supreme Court bench, sat in a swivel chair during the whole period of the World War, never hearing a percussion cap pop or sensing the smell of gunpowder or getting near enough to a training camp to learn the difference between 'order arms' and 'forward march.'

What People Can Expect
"With Jacobins of this type constituting the wet nurse action of the Supreme Court, what an era of peace and contentment could the American people confidently anticipate with the revival of the NRA and kindred vagaries of the brain truster variety!

"What other and how many peculiar schemes of government are to be presented for submissive legislative action in confident expectation that they will meet with the favor of the 'biased' half dozen who are to adorn the bench, is left to our imagination, because not exactly specified in the proclaimed program. We are simply given to understand that the President has a 'mandate from the people' to so reconstitute the Supreme Court as to have it sanction whatever the White House proposes to an agreeing Congress, particularly of it involves no 'check upon unauthorized freedom,' to quote Grover Cleveland again, or 'restraint on dangerous liberty.'

"But we know there has been no such mandate from the people to rape the Supreme Court or to tamper with the Constitution. The Constitution belongs to the people. It was written by great representatives of the people, chosen for the purpose, and was ratified by the people as the supreme charter of their government, to be respected and maintained with the help of God.

"With the consent and by mandate of the people their Constitution provides how it may be amended to meet the requirements of the ages. It has always been so, and no administration in the history of the republic has attempted to flank the Constitution by a legislative short cut so vividly denounced by Woodrow Wilson as 'an outrage upon constitutional morality.'

"The people were not asked for any such mandate. They were kept in ignorance of any such purpose. They were told that the liberal aims of the President could very likely be achieved within the limitations of the Constitution; and if not, we would suggest to the people amendments that would authorize such certain things to be done.

"When once it was intimated by political adversaries that the Supreme Court might be tampered with, the insinuation was branded as a splenic libel. No word in the platform of the prevailing party could be interpreted into advocacy of any such abnormality as that now in issue.

Calls Assertions Inaccurate
"Quite the contrary, every platform declaration on the subject gave promise of the customary constitutional procedure. But somebody badly advising the President was evidently afraid of the people. The attorney general apparently feared to ask a mandate from the people for his wretched scheme, defended so weakly in reason as to invite expressions of contempt. Convinced by his own official reports of inaccurate assertions about congestion of the Supreme Court calendar, and now flatly contradicted on this and other points by the chief justice and associates, there is nothing left of his bitter assault on the court more notable than the brutal contention that six eminent members 'get out' and give place to six others of whom the department of justice would probably have a cunning hand.

"Of course the proposal being discussed will not contribute to the

"HOW MUCH WILL A PACKARD COST ME?"

SEND IN THE COUPON and you'll find that the Packard Six costs less to buy than you ever dared hope.

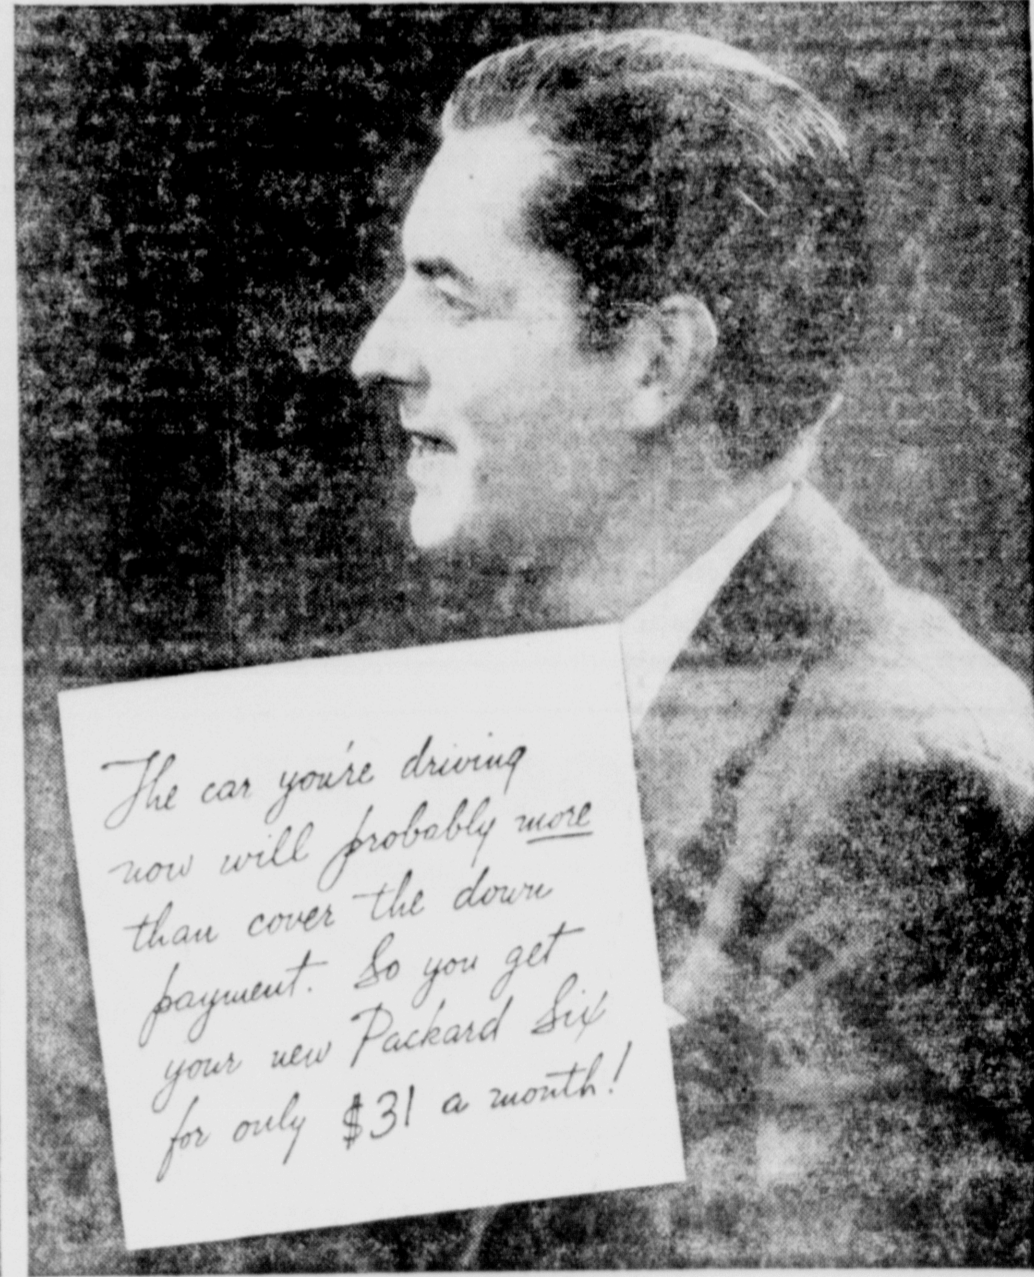

And here's more good news... the Packard Six can challenge any car for low-cost operation. This is true for two reasons...

First, because this powerful Six is unusually thrifty with gasoline. (Ask us to show you the actual gas mileage that local owners are getting).

Second, because the car is designed so simply that it costs very little to service. For example, most service operations can be performed on the Packard Six in less time, with less labor hours, than on cars lower in price!

efficiency of the court. It will do in this case particularly what Thomas Jefferson pungently deplored when he declared 'the multiplication of judges only enables the weak to outvote the wise.' The fact is their proposed bill will cure none of the alleged evils which offend their ideas of judicial reform.

Suggests Way to Do It

"Why should we not proceed, as in honor we are bound to do, by first contriving legislation for social and economic security, painstakingly drafted by competent lawyers with a clear conception of the constitutional prohibitions against invading the rights of business and individuals by a species of confiscation and by utter indifference for reserved powers of the states? Why should we not quit legislating by pious preambles and conform our enactments to the requirements of the Constitution and thus put upon notice the cabal of amateur experiments that we will have no more of their trash."

"Let us have no more bills for 'unfettered' delegation of authority, so obviously unconstitutional as to have prompted the President to make an unhappy appeal for disregarding all 'reasonable doubts.' Let us meet the issue confidently, but with a determination to promote the general welfare of the nation and not merely to surrender control of the government to special groups."

Ask People to Act!

"If it then be found that we were mistaken in the expressed belief that the Constitution is ample to our purposes, let us do what we promised to do and appeal to the people to amend their supreme law. Let the impatient proponents of the pending scheme turn to the advice of George Washington in his famous farewell address in which he admonished against disregarding 'reciprocal checks in the exercise of political power,' saying: 'If in the opinion of the people, the distribution or modification of the constitutional powers be in any particular wrong, let it be corrected by an amendment in the way in which the Constitution designates. But let there be no change by usurpation; for though this in one instance may be the instrument of good, it is the customary weapon by which free governments are destroyed.'"

"Let those who would confide to the President complete control over the Supreme Court by sanction of an obedient Congress reread the farewell address of Andrew Jackson in which he cautioned the country against the jeopardy to their liberties of a consolidated government and the evil consequences of 'permitting temporary circumstances, or the hope of better promoting the public welfare, to influence, in any degree, our decisions upon the extent of the authority of the general government.' Let us abide by the Constitution as it is written," he urged, "or amend it in the Constitutional mode if it be found defective."

Jefferson's Attitude

"And, in this connection, it might be well for the proponents of this court packing scheme, who started their campaign by taking the name of Thomas Jefferson in vain, to remember that Jefferson's bitterness against the Supreme Court was provoked by the very thing they now advocate."

"Jefferson condemned the court for its failure to void the unbridled actions of Congress in invading the rights of the states, whereas the court packers are incensed against the court for restraining the unconstitutional actions of Congress in disregarding individual and community rights. Their position is in sharp antagonism to that of Jefferson, who never dreamed of packing the Supreme Court to compel obedience to his views. Evidently Jefferson thought, as Woodrow Wilson afterward proclaimed, that such a thing involved 'constitutional immorality.'"

Warns Public

"I venture to beg the public not to be diverted from the real issue involved in this controversy. Conceding the court's constitutional authority to avoid acts of Congress is idle surplusage. The court has exercised this implied power for 130 years. It has been regarded as an indispensable power in government under a written Constitution. There must be a Supreme tribunal to which every citizen, high or humble, rich or poor, may appeal for the vindication of his rights and the preservation of life, liberty and property."

"Long before the Supreme Court was established this principle was presented by Chancellor Wythe, Jefferson's law teacher, with respect to acts of parliament and decrees of the crown. It is a waste of time to discuss now this and other moot questions not touched in the remotest sense by the pending proposition. Under the bill sent up to Congress, prepared by God knows whom, the six substitute justices would exercise the established power to rule finally on the acts of Congress; and the dangerous circumstances faces the nation that we know pretty well in advance what their ruling would be."

"The question of majority or other numerical decision is not comprehended in the White House proposal nor the question of Congress to review and reverse the court's decisions. The predominant question is whether the practice of a century under an independent judiciary is to be abruptly terminated by authorizing the President to seize the court by the process of packing in order to compel agreement with the Executive view."

Urges a People's Mandate

Should this be done with a mandate from the people? Should the people be ignored and, without asking their consent in the usual way, submit helplessly to having their Constitution tortured into meanings which have been declared into contravention of the fundamental law? If Andrew Jackson was right in asserting that 'eternal vigilance by the people is the price of liberty,' God knows that never before since the establishment of the republic could the people better be warned to preserve their priceless heritage. The talk about 'party loyalty' being involved in the opposition to this extraordinary scheme is a familiar species of coercion. It is sheer poppycock."

"No political party since the establishment of the government ever dared make an issue of packing the Supreme Court."

"But a single one of the Presidents of the United States ever was accused of doing such a thing and the mere suspicion, however ill founded in truth, has proved a taint upon his reputation which his memorable military achievements have not been able entirely to wipe away."

Historians Quoted

"Moreover, his alleged offense was inconsequential in contrast with that which now threatens the nation. As Warren says in his history of the Supreme Court: 'To the proposal advanced at various times of intense party passion, that the court be increased in number to overcome a temporary majority for or against some particular piece of legislation, the good sense of the American people has always given a decided disapproval.'"

"And as James Bryce in his 'American Commonwealth' says, whenever such a thing should occur 'the security provided for the protection of the Constitution is gone like a morning mist.'"

"Thomas Jefferson in a single sentence comprised the unalterable detestation of honest men for the packing of the court when he said: 'It is better to toss up cross and pile in a cause than to refer to a judge whose mind is warped by any motive whatever in that particular case.' Later he wrote: 'An officer who selects judges for principles which necessarily lead to condemnation, might as well take his culprits to the scaffold without the mockery of trial.' This Jefferson said of packed juries. How infinitely worse would be a packed Supreme Court, albeit in one case the penalty is imprisonment and in the other the universal abhorrence of mankind!"

Touches on British Incident

"I have said this proposal to pack the Supreme Court is without precedence in American jurisprudence and that we must go back for a corresponding scheme to the infamous processes of the British star chamber. Macauley gives us the incident. When the king wanted a servile court to sanction his purposes, contrary to decisions rendered, he summoned the chief justice to the palace and told him peremptorily that he would be dismissed unless he changed his opinions. 'Sir,' said the courageous chief justice, 'my position is of little concern to me, since I have not many years to live; but my convictions are of vital importance, and I am humiliated to find that your majesty could think me capable of altering my mind merely to retain my place!'"

"The chief justice then bravely admonished his kingly master: 'Your majesty may find twelve judges of your mind, but hardly twelve honest lawyers.' Needless to say, the chief justice was dismissed, just as the offending members of the Supreme Court have been rudely told to 'begone' if they do not relish the proposed mortification of being supplied with six judicial wet-nurses, and well might any one of all of these eminent jurists, in imitation of that fearless Englishman, say to the appointing power: 'You may find six judges of your mind, but not six Constitutional lawyers. Should the iniquitous scheme go through, the intelligence and character of the nation will be interested to know what lawyer of notable attainments or independent spirit would be willing to go on the Supreme court bench in such circumstances or could regard such an appointment as an honor.'"

Doubts People's Trust

"Doubtless there are practitioners eager for such recognition; but are they men whom the nation would prefer or who could feel comfortable in association with those now constituting the court. I am but an unlearned layman, untrained in the ethics of the legal profession; nevertheless, I can not escape the conclusion that any man of approved sensibility who should accept such a distinction would experience trouble in outliving the mistake. Moreover, I have a distinct premonition that the people of America would not confidently trust to the supreme decision of such a court the life liberty and pursuit of happiness guaranteed by the Constitution."

"I am far from intimating that the President of the United States is incapable of selecting suitable men for the Supreme Court. I am simply accepting his own word and that of his spokesmen to the effect that he wants men 'biased in behalf of his legislative and administrative projects, who may be counted on to reverse the Supreme Court decisions already rendered and give such other decisions of policy as may be desired. This is not my view alone; it is the conclusion of millions of alarmed citizens throughout the nation."

Rudyard Kipling's Reply

"The assumption of the proponents of this scheme to tamper with the court and the Constitution that only they are the President's real friends has no justification in fact."

He is not a friend of the President who would subject him to the biting indictment which Rudyard Kipling applied to a famous autocrat who answered a petition from his people with the imperious assertion that 'This is my country. These are my laws. Those who do not like to obey my laws can leave my country.' Wrote Kipling:

"He shall break his judges if they cross his word;
He shall rule above the law, calling on the Lord."

Strangers of his counsel, hirelings of his pay,
These shall deal out justice—sell, deny, delay."

We shall take our station, dirt beneath his feet,
While his hired captains jeer us in the street."

"Rather is he the real friend of the President who will command to his serious attention the ringing words of Thomas Jefferson when he proclaimed himself 'against writing letters to judiciary officers' because he 'thought them independent of the executive, not subject to its coercion and therefore not obliged to attend to its admonitions.'"

Renowned Students Quoted
"In conclusion, my friends, let me press upon you the solemn warning of a world renowned student of representative government, John Stuart Mill, when he said:
"A people may prefer a free government; but if from indolence, or carelessness, or cowardice, or want of public spirit, they are unequal to the exertions necessary for preserving it; if they will not fight for it when directly attacked; if they can be deluded by the artifices used to cheat them out of it; if by momentary discouragement, or temporary panic, or a fit of enthusiasm for an individual, they can be induced to lay their liberties at the feet of even a great man, or trust him with powers which enable him to subvert their institutions—in all these cases they are more or less unfit for liberty."

"Abraham Lincoln at Gettysburg thought the Civil War was a test of whether a 'government of the people, by the people, for the people' should perish from the face of the earth. Just as profoundly are some of us convinced that no threat to representative democracy since the foundation of the republic has exceeded in its evil portents this attempt to pack the Supreme Court of the United States and thus destroy the purity and independence of his tribunal of last resort."

FORECAST PIN RECORD SET IN 1927 MAY FALL

American Bowling Congress Teams Rolling High

New York, March 30.—(AP)—Followers of American Bowling Congress tournaments are predicting that the all-time record mark, 3,199, scored by the Tea Shops of Milwaukee at the 1927 tournament in Peoria, will go by the boards before the curtain is lowered on the national pin championships.

They base their predictions on the "action" and the manner in which the pins are falling in the tourney here. Most of the heralded entries will roll later in the tourney, yet the early scoring is indicative of high totals.

Lins Wieners Third

While the Lins Wieners of Milwaukee were rolling into third place in the main event last night with a 2,661 total, two unknown line-ups were scoring new high games but failed to go places in the standing. One team, the Eaton Office Supply Company, Buffalo, scored 1,091, after dismal opening games of 820 and 909 while the McMahon Dairy, Altoona, Penna., hit high game 1,098, after starting with only 817. The Buffalo group wound up with 2,820 while the McMahon's who finished with 869, totaled 2,784.

Grant, Riggs Move Toward Atlanta Tourney Finals

Atlanta, March 30.—(AP)—Bryan Grant and Bobby Riggs headed today into second round opposition that seemed unlikely to check their drive to the finals of the Atlanta invitational tennis tournament—and a possible hint on Davis Cup lineups.

Grant, diminutive Atlantan who is a veteran at 26, set the tone for the eight seeded entries yesterday by blasting Burtz Boulware of Georgia Tech, 6-0, 6-2.

News Briefs From Training Camps of American and National Leaguers

By The Associated Press
Lakeland, Fla.—March 30.—Manager Mickey Cochrane of the Detroit Tigers hopes his star rookie pitcher, Paul (Dizzy) Trout, will need his counsel.

The talkative Trout tried to badger the St. Louis Cards Sunday. In one inning the gas house gang routed him from the mound, Cochrane gently reprimanded Trout yesterday, telling him "you've got a chance to make good in the majors and don't miff it because you want to be like Dizzy Dean."

Sarasota, Fla.—Righthander Jack Wilson will make his first 1937 start today when the Red Sox open their city series with the Bees 1400 miles from home.

Bill McKechnie will send Deacon Danny MacFayden and Lou Fette, his most effective citrus season pitchers, into action for the Bees.

Orlando, Fla.—Joe Kuhel, Washington first baseman who was hit in the head by a pitched ball last week, was back in the game today, showing no sign of being "gunshy."

Seguin, Tex.—The Browns presented a united lineup against the Tulsa Oilers today since the second stringers, under Jim Bottomley, joined the traveling team, directed by Manager Rogers Hornsby.

Daytona Beach, Fla.—The Cards really should play "tight" baseball. Frequent cleanings have shrunk their gray uniforms to the form-fitting stage.

Winter Haven, Fla.—Bucky Walters and Wayne Lamaster, who shut out the Boston Red Sox last Thursday, were assigned by Manager Wilson to pitch today for the Phils against the Detroit Tigers in a return exhibition game at Lakeland.

Los Angeles, Calif.—As a reward for polishing off the Cubs and Los Angeles in a row Manager Jimmy Dykes gave his White Sox a holiday today.

The Cubs take on Los Angeles, cheered over hitting of first baseman Rip Collins yesterday against the Pirates. Collins got four hits in six trips.

Santa Monica, Calif.—The Pittsburgh Pirates, still puffing from the base-running they did yesterday, lined up today against the Seattle club with Jim Weaver and Bill Swift on the mound. The Bucs made 24 hits but lost to the Chicago Cubs yesterday, 23 to 14.

Tampa, Fla.—Expressing concern over "late hours" kept by the Cincinnati Reds, Manager Chuck Dressen clamped down a midnight curfew with a warning of fines for violators.

New Orleans—Manager Steve O'Neill nominated Johnny Heving and Carl Fisher to twirl for the Cleveland Indians today against the New Orleans Pelicans.

Gulfport, Miss.—Although most of the New York Giants still were praising Cleveland's Bob Feller today after their failure to hit his delivery, Dick Bartell and Sam Leslie claimed Van Mungo of Brooklyn had a slight edge over the youngster in speed.

Clearwater, Fla.—Jack Winsett, Brooklyn recruit outfielder, is carrying on the old Dodger tradition of daffiness which Manager Burleigh Grimes is seeking to banish. Wrapped in thought on the bench during an exhibition game, Winsett was rapped on the head by a high foul.

St. Petersburg, Fla.—With Red Ruffing still a holdout, Pitcher Monte Pearson's first start for the New York Yankees this spring will be watched carefully. If all goes well, Pearson likely will be designated the Yanks' No. 1 right hander.

WORLD POCKET BILLIARD MEET WELL UNDERWAY

1935 Champion Ponzi Upset By Crane in Opening Round

New York, March 30.—(AP)—With one of the favorites already upset, the world pocket billiards championships gets into full swing today with afternoon and evening sessions of two matches each.

Andrew Ponzi, who won the title in 1935 but failed to defend it last year, came a cropper in his first match last night after his title successor, Jimmy Caras of Wilmington, Del., had staged a triumphant opening.

Was Rated 2-1 Favorite
Rated at 2 to 1 to take the title, Ponzi was trounced soundly by 23-year-old Irving Crane of Rochester, N. Y., 125 to 78, in 18 innings.

Caras, second choice at 3-1 in the tournament odds, whipped Fay Gainer of Vinceland, N. J., 125-87 in 22 innings.

The other eight players swing into action today. This afternoon Willie Mosconi of Philadelphia tackles Joseph Diehl of Rockford, Ill., and Bennie Allen, Kansas City veteran, plays Charles Seaback of New York. The night matches pair Erwin Rudolph of Cleveland against Onofrio Lauri of Brooklyn and Ralph Greenleaf of Chicago against Marcel Camp of Detroit.

FORMER CHAMP DEAD

Chicago, March 30.—(AP)—Barney Abel, 65, top-ranking featherweight boxer 40 years ago and one-time manager of Sammy Mandell and Alcott Langford was buried today. Abel died Sunday of heart disease.

GRAIN SUPPLY

New York, March 30.—(AP)—Visible supply of American grain shows the following changes in bushels: Wheat decreased 1,514,000; corn decreased 987,000; oats decreased 1,100,000; rye decreased 32,000; barley decreased 400,000.

BOUT QUARREL HAS BRADDOCK IN CONFUSION

May Have To Fight Twice In June Or Not At All

Woodcliff, N. J., March 30.—(AP)—Even Champion James J. Braddock was lost today in the confusion of the heavyweight situation.

Facing court action for his avowed intention of ignoring a contract to fight Max Schmeling, the champion clings somewhat pathetically to the outmoded idea that a fighter should fight.

"I don't know anything about this law business," he said, "but I'd sorta like to fight again."

At the moment, it appears that Madison Square Garden has the whip-hand. If the New Jersey federal court does restrain Braddock from meeting Louis until he has fought Schmeling, the champion's chances are not good. And even if the court refuses an injunction against the Louis fight, the champion's problems still are unsolved.

Suit Is Possible

Recent developments in Chicago indicate that somebody out that way is not too anxious to have the Louis-Braddock fight and yet there always is the possibility of a suit if Gould does not go through with the Chicago bout.

The only thing everybody agrees on is that Braddock deserves a better break than he's getting.

The rise of the champion is one of the ring's most dramatic stories, and especially in this little Jersey town, the neighbors think it deserves a happy ending.

VERBAL SITDOWN STRIKE

Chicago, March 30.—(AP)—Joe Foley, promoter for the proposed heavyweight championship fight here June 22 between Champion James J. Braddock and Joe Louis, was on a "verbal sitdown strike" today.

Foley expressed pleasure over the action yesterday by the state house of representatives of Springfield in tabling a measure which would set a $10 "top" for seats for the fight rather than the scheduled top of $27.50. He added, however, he would have no comment on the bout until all disturbing angles were smoothed out.

Braddock was served yesterday with an order to appear April 5 to show cause why a temporary injunction should not be granted restraining him from meeting Louis. The order was obtained by Madison Square Garden, which holds a contract calling for a Braddock-Max Schmeling fight in New York June 3.

The Illinois representatives killed the "ten top" bill by a vote of 70 to 24, with Rep. Elmer J. Schnackenberg, Republican leader and Benjamin S. Adamowski, Democratic chieftain, leading the tabling move. The bill was passed recently by an overwhelming senate vote.

A duplicate measure is before a house sub-committee.

A report will be made April 7.

AMERICA OUT OF DOORS

PICKING BAIT-CASTING ROD

By O. Warren Smith

Probably there is no such thing as a general purpose bait casting rod, though perhaps we can approximate it. I much doubt the advisability of using one longer than 5½ feet, and therefore, I recommend a two piece rod. The single piece rod is too unhandy to transport. I prefer the long tip, short butt construction, indeed, nearly all rods come so built. If you desire a one piece, which may have better action, you probably will be compelled to send away for it. Frankly, I seldom take my one piece from its case. As to comparative strength, I do not know but that the two piece is the stronger, and I do know it is a whole lot more handy in transporting.

Now as to weight. I no longer recommend the lighter rods, for there is no virtue in employing a rod so light that you will tremble every time a good bass or pickerel connects up. A 5½ ounce is in all conscience light enough for average casting and if there was another ounce added, I would feel none the worse. My directions are easy to remember, 5½ feet long, 5½ ounces. A caster should be stiff, but not too stiff, neither should it be whippy. What is just right? No man can say, for the likes of individual anglers differ, and it seems that what fits one will not fit another. Yes, there is such a thing as "fit," and make not mistake about it. There must be sufficient action to aid in casting, of course, and enough backbone to stand up against the pull of the line and surge of a fish.

As to material, that too, is a matter for individual choice. There was a time when we thought the steel rod a poor choice, but today they are made in all styles and shapes and sell at all prices. The solid steels are good from tip to butt, actionable and with all the backbone needed; they are a bit unhandy to carry, owing to the fact that only the hand-grasp is removable, but then you don't have to worry about joints. The tubular lend themselves to many joints, and if you have liking for a pocket rod, there is nothing better. There are times when the telescopic rods are very convenient, though I prefer to recommend regular length joints. The steels are O. K. I am not an advocate of solid woods, though I have some which have stood up well, notably a greenheart and a native hickory. Just the same, when it comes to wood, there is nothing comparable to a split-bamboo, and the angler can suit himself as to price and finish. I doubt if there is much difference in well made rods from the various factories, though we all have our favorites. There are makes we swear at, and then there are makes we swear at, but the funny thing is no two casters swear in the same direction. As to sheer beauty, well, a well made and finished split-bamboo is a joy forever. I recommend trying out several rods until you get hold of the one that nestles down in your hand lovingly and becomes a living part of your casting arm.

ILLINI HUSKY AIMING TO WIN NINTH LETTER

If He Gets It, He Will Be First Since 1920 To Win So Many

Champaign, Ill., March 30.—(AP)—A blond young husky named Wilbur Henry, becoming round-shouldered under weight of athletic honors, is about to have his burden increased. Henry is on the University of Illinois baseball squad and aiming at his ninth major "I".

If he gets it—and Coach Walter Roettger sees no reason why he shouldn't—he will become the first to amass such a number since 1920 when Burt Ingwersen accomplished the feat. George Fencil, who was graduated in 1931, had nine letters to his credit, but three were for soccer, considered a minor sport in comparison with the big autumn business of football.

With eight letters now in his possession, Henry, a former star of Benton high school teams, is the campus' best all-around athlete.

Henry, a 10-letter man in high school, says the first collegiate letter is the hardest to get. "After that they come easy," he claims.

He has three monograms for football and basketball and two for baseball.

The 1936 soybean crop in Manchuria, world's largest surplus producer, was 26 per cent larger than that threshed in 1935, but a little more than 9 per cent below the previous 5-year average, according to information received by the University of Illinois college of agriculture through the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

The 1936 crop amounted to 4,602,000 short tons as compared with the 5-year average of 5,083,000 tons.

SUCCESSFUL TROLLING

By Ben C. Robinson

Trolling is a very pleasant and, at times, a very successful method of fishing for such game fish as muskie, pike, bass and lake trout. In fact in lake trout fishing, except in the very early spring season, trolling from canoe or boat is about the only method ordinarily used for the capture of the lurking lakers. A few of the lake trout fishermen do angle for them with long line and live minnow baited hooks, but generally speaking, the most of these fish are taken in summer season by slow, deep trolling with copper wire line and wobbling spoon or twirling spinner lures over cold and rocky pools of the northern lakes.

The Archer Spinner

The Archer spinner type of lure is most often used in this type of trout fishing. A strong, dependable rod of four or five foot length can be used, one with good sized guides and a large caliber reel on which is spooled several hundred feet of braided copper or chromium plated steel trolling wire line.

To the end of this line is attached the Archer Spinner. This type of lure consists of a strong baited needle and movable blades that are shaped to form a metal propeller so that when the lure is drawn through water it spins and rolls.

It is armed with short twisted gut simps to which are attached small treble hooks. A shiner or mud minnow is baited on the needle and the spinners are then clamped down to hold minnow in place.

The bait turns and rolls as it passes over the haunts of the lake trout schools. It is one of the best of all the northern lake trolling lures.

HUNTING

New Code Submitted to Illinois Lawmakers Today

Springfield, Ill., March 30.—(AP)—Bills to recodify the state's conservation laws were introduced in the house today with the regulation of fox hunting one of their major provisions.

Approved by Charles F. Thompson, director of the state department of conservation, the bills sponsored by Rep. Frank Holten, East St. Louis Democrat, would retain the present December 1 to January 15 hunting season on fox in the southern district and allow the animal to be killed at anytime in the central and northern zones.

This provision seeks to protect one of the major sports of southern Illinois hunters and rid central and northern Illinois of one of the greatest poultry farm menaces.

The bills also would permit hunters to bag ducks and other migratory birds "on the wing" only, increase by 25 cents the license fees for fishing, hunting and trapping; establish a state-wide season on pheasants, quail and rabbits and regulate the catch and sale of minnows.

The proposed code failed of passage two years ago.

Sporting goods stores and similar establishments could be authorized by the conservation department to sell licenses without profit.

The new code would provide that the state open season for migratory birds and the daily limit would coincide with federal regulations.

Fishing through or under ice except with pole and line would be prohibited and the number of hooks on any line would be limited to 100 for each license.

One new provision would be for licensed game management areas with regulations for the rearing and release of birds on such tracts, and hunting and tagging birds. Several other states have such provisions.

PLATAK NEARING HANDBALL TITLE FOR THIRD TIME

If Accomplished He Will Be Third To Achieve Honor

Chicago, March 30.—(AP)—Joe Platak, who had to "lasso" his left hand to develop a shot with his right, thinks he may be lucky enough this week to become the third player to win three consecutive national singles handball championships.

Platak, 28-year-old Chicago post-office clerk, is favored to accomplish that feat in the A. A. U. tournament in progress here. A natural southpaw, he can "carry the mail" with killing drives from either hand and competitors say he is one of the finest all-around players of recent years.

Won 1935-1936 Crowns

The husky Chicago star won the 1935 national crown at Washington and repeated last year at Los Angeles. But behind his rise to prominence is a story of dogged perseverance; of hours of practice against garage walls and "home made" courts near his home.

"I could make good shots with my left hand from the start," he recalled, "but I might just as well be without a right hand, so little did I use it. I entered a few small tournaments and went out quickly, so I had to do something."

"I fixed a rope harness and fastened my left hand behind my back. Hour after hour I worked like that, even playing games with far better players."

His determination paid dividends.

District Attorney Takes Full Charge Of Graft Sifting

San Francisco, March 30.—(AP)—Backed by a rising vote of confidence and some applause by members of the grand jury, portly District Attorney Matthew Brady resumed full charge of the police graft investigation today.

His leadership was in jeopardy for several days as a result of disclosures that his note for $1,170 had been held more than 20 years by Peter McDonough, whose bail bond house was described as a "fountainhead of corruption" in a report on police graft.

Last night the grand jury told State Attorney General U. S. Webb it still had confidence in Brady.

SYPHILIS AND RABIES CASES MORE COMMON

Springfield, Ill., Mar. 30.—(AP)—Public Health Director Frank Jirka warned today that rabies is "considerably more prevalent" in Illinois this year than last and has spread from dogs to other animals.

Jirka said that of 176 animal heads examined in the state diagnostic laboratories since January 1, 155 were of dogs, 15 cats, two each of cows and horses and one hog and one squirrel. For the same period, he said 1,073 persons had been treated with anti-rabies vaccine.

He added that last year 844 heads were examined and 5,476 persons treated with vaccine furnished by the state at a cost of $42,057.

Because of the many heads being sent in for examination, the director said the diagnostic work was being transferred from the capitol laboratory to the health department's main laboratories at the state fairgrounds.

Jirka added that Illinois had 429 deaths from accidents in January, of which 132 were blamed on motor vehicle mishaps.

A smallpox epidemic was reported to be threatening as 63 new cases were reported during the past week, which Jirka said was the highest weekly incidence peak since June 1, 1931.

News of Interest to Community Farmers

Intimidation, Coercion Lurk in Supreme Court Plan, Says Farm Leader

Asserts It Strikes At Very Roots Of Our Liberty

Appearing before the Senate Judiciary committee in opposition to the President's court proposal, Fred Brenckman, Washington representative of the National Grange, a nation-wide organization with a membership of over 800,000 farmers, described the proposed legislation as "an attempt to intimidate and coerce the Supreme Court." Continuing, Brenckman said, "If this measure should be enacted, those who give it their support will be placed in imminent peril of standing accused at the bar of history with having supinely acquiesced in a step resulting in the overthrow of our constitutional form of government. Those arrayed against it will deserve to have their names enshrined in the hearts of the people as the faithful guardians of their most sacred rights."

His statement in full follows: "The message that President Roosevelt sent to Congress early in February, proposing a reorganization of the Federal judiciary that is intended primarily to curb the Supreme Court, has stirred the nation from center to circumference as it has never been stirred before in a time of profound peace."

"In approaching the problem that has been raised by this proposal, and in the effort to arrive at an intelligent conclusion regarding the wisdom or the unwisdom of the President's plan, there are certain fundamental considerations that we should not allow to become obscured."

"It must be remembered that the United States of America is an indivisible union of inextricable states. The Supreme law of the land is the Constitution, which made and preserved us a nation. The Constitution is no longer an experiment; it has been tried and tested for over 150 years, and while no one claims absolute perfection for it, it is universally recognized as the most perfect instrument of government ever devised by the heart and brain of man. Under the Constitution, the will of the people is sovereign. Those who have been elected or appointed to any public office, however exalted, are the servants of the people, and not their masters."

"As Justice Davis said in the famous Milligan case of Civil war days, 'The Constitution is a law for rulers and people and covers with the shield of its protection all classes of men at all times and under all circumstances.'"

"The framers of our fundamental law created a government of three separate divisions, the legislative, the executive and the judicial. It is the duty of Congress to make laws; it is the duty of the President to execute them, and it is the duty of the judicial department to interpret them and pass upon their validity, if their constitutionality is challenged in the courts. Every precaution was taken by the founding fathers of the republic to prevent any one department of the government from usurping the powers or prerogatives of the other two."

"The federal government is one of delegated powers; it is expressly provided that the powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the states, are reserved to the states, or to the people themselves. Our organic law itself declares: 'This Constitution, and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof, shall be the supreme law of the land.'"

"Laws that are made in violation of the Constitution are null and void. In reality, they are not laws at all."

Supreme Court Is No Usurper
"There are those who assert that the right to invalidate an act of Congress is one that has been usurped by the Supreme court. Nothing could be farther from the truth. Article III, Sec. 2, of the Constitution reads: 'The judicial power shall extend to all cases, in law and equity, arising under this Constitution, the laws of the United States, and treaties made, or which shall be made, under their authority.'"

"If the Constitution is the supreme law of the land, and there can be no argument on that point, then it necessarily follows that a statute which is not made 'in pursuance thereof' is invalid."

"When the constitutionality of an act of Congress is subjected to legal test, the final authority in determining the question at issue is the Supreme Court of the United States. It is manifest that neither Congress, which passed the statute, nor the President, who approved it, should be asked to pass judgment on their own handwork. There must be an umpire, and that umpire, under our scheme of government, is the Supreme court. If the lesser law, passed by the people's representatives, contravenes, then the lesser law must fall. If it were otherwise, the Constitution would be useless."

"The truth appears to be that those who are most vociferous in their condemnation of the Supreme court because it has exercised the power with which it is undeniably vested, are impatient with the Constitution itself. To make the Supreme court the custodian and defender of the Constitution without the right to declare invalid an act of Congress that is in violation of the organic law would be, as Madison said, as much a mockery as a scabbard put in the hands of a soldier without a sword."

The Power of Impeachment
"But, in speaking of the checks and balances contained in the Constitution, someone may ask, 'What check is there on the Supreme court; shall America be ruled by a judicial oligarchy of Nine Old Men? That is a fair question, and it must not be evaded. The answer may be found in Article II, Sec. 4, of the Constitution, which reads: 'The President, Vice-President and all civil officers of the United States, shall be removed from office on impeachment for, and conviction of, treason, bribery, or other high crimes and misdemeanors.'"

"Judges of inferior federal courts have been impeached and removed from office before. While in the early days of the Republic, threats of impeachment were leveled at no less a personage than Chief Justice John Marshall, together with some of his associates, no justice of the United States Supreme court has thus far been impeached. But the power of impeachment exists, and if circumstances justifying its use should arise, it may be exercised."

In the days of Marshall, the court was situated on the ground that it arrogated too much power to the federal government. Today it is being denounced with even greater fury and intensity because it does not go far enough in that direction."

Court and Executive Vetoes Compared

"From the foundation of the government down to the present time, Congress has enacted approximately 25,000 public laws. Of this number, 77 have been declared unconstitutional. Roughly speaking, only about a dozen of the acts invalidated are considered of any great importance. On the other hand, our Presidents, from George Washington to Franklin D. Roosevelt, have vetoed 1,167 acts of Congress, or about 15 times the number that have been set aside by the Supreme court. Why should the Supreme court be accused of nullifying the action of the representatives of the people when it declares a law unconstitutional, while comparatively little is said about a Presidential veto, which is usually soon forgotten?"

"It should be kept in mind that when the Supreme court voids a legislative act, it is only done after trial in open court and after full consideration on the part of nine justices. But when the President disapproves an act of Congress, he may do it arbitrarily and without consulting anyone. In the case of a pocket veto, he does not even give a reason."

"That the Supreme court has been placed in a difficult position during the past few years is very true indeed. In our efforts to combat the depression and restore the economic equilibrium of the country, much legislation was hastily drawn and enacted. Some of it has proved sound and constructive, but certain other measures transcend the powers of the federal government under the Constitution. In passing upon these acts, the Supreme court, in performance of its sworn duty, had the courage to say that these acts were unconstitutional."

The National Recovery Act
"One of the most important of these laws was the National Industrial Recovery Act. Under this act, all sorts of business and industrial groups were authorized to formulate codes, which, when approved by the President, had the force and effect of law. More than 750 of these codes were formulated."

"Every code contained a clause against employing its provisions to promote monopolies or to eliminate or oppress small enterprises. It is noteworthy, however, that in almost every instance the codes were written by the dominant groups in any particular business or industry. Instead of keeping in mind the general welfare, as legislators would, the primary concern of those who write the codes was to promote their own interests, regardless of every other consideration. Where a trust or monopoly did not exist, one was formed. Even the pencil manufacturer ers had a trust. All sorts of high-handed and unwarranted acts were performed under the authority of these codes. In order to stay in business, many small concerns were virtually compelled to violate the code under which they were working."

"In due time, the Supreme court was asked to rule on the constitutionality of the Recovery Act, and on May 27, 1935, the Act was declared unconstitutional by a unanimous decision."

"The gist of the court's opinion was to the effect that Congress had over-stepped the bounds of the Constitution in delegating legislative power to those who were not entitled to exercise it. In a concurring opinion, Justice Cardozo, who is classed as one of the liberals of the Supreme court bench, characterized the Recovery Act as assuming the proportions of a legal riot. He likewise cogently said that: 'no such plenitude of power' as Congress had delegated was susceptible of transfer."

"Remembering that the very first line of the Constitution, following the preamble, declares that 'All legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States,' what was wrong with that decision? Instead of finding fault with the court and making studious efforts to undermine the confidence of the people in its work, should it not be commended for its altogether just and righteous ruling in this case?"

"Looking back upon the wreckage and monstrosities of the NRA, one may well ask why Congress and the state legislators should not continue to make our laws, as they did from the days of the Revolution down to the present time. It may also be said that, in the opinion of many competent persons, the recovery of the country from the effects of the depression dated from the invalidation of the Recovery Act."

"Be that as it may, while the act remained in effect, its operators thwarted the declared purpose of Congress to give agriculture price parity with industry as contemplated under the AAA, which subsequently was also declared unconstitutional."

The President's Proposal

"Referring to the President's message to Congress on Feb. 5, and the legislation which is now pending, the attitude of the National Grange is that any proper and constructive steps that can be taken to eliminate delay and expedite the administration of justice in the inferior federal courts should have approval. The proposed changes in connection with the inferior courts should be dealt with in the form of a separate bill."

"So far as the Supreme court is concerned, if the bill now under consideration should be enacted, it would empower the President to appoint six additional justices, bringing the total membership of the court to 15. Six of the nine justices now composing the court are past 70 years of age. As is well known, the Supreme court sits as a unit in the hearing and disposition of cases; therefore, its work cannot be speeded up by increasing the number of judges. Moreover, it has been shown that during recent years the court has kept abreast of its docket."

"The proposal to increase the personnel of the court to the extent authorized under the present plan, if adopted, would reduce the deliberations of our highest court to the level of a mass meeting, unless gag rule should be imposed, as is sometimes done in the House of Representatives, with its 435 members. By every rule of human conduct, the effect of such a step would be to slow up the machinery of the court and to retard its work."

"Aside from the objections to packing the Supreme court in order to influence its decisions, against which millions of patriotic citizens are rising in revolt, it is clear that the real issue is one which involves a redistribution of power as between the federal government and the states. Thus far, this phase of the question has scarcely been mentioned."

The People Should Decide

"If the people want to change the Constitution in accordance with the rules laid down in that instrument itself, so as to give the federal government greater control over agriculture, industry and commerce, that is their undisputed privilege. However, before such a step is taken, it would be well to bear in mind that there is only one way in which the powers of the federal government can be expanded, and that is by contracting or restricting in a corresponding degree the rights of the states and of individuals."

"There are those who believe that this nation, with its wide domain, its diversified interests, and its teeming population is too great to be either democratically or wisely governed by a bureaucracy at Washington."

"But in all fairness, the Supreme court has no right to change the Constitution through strained or unwarranted interpretation. That is what some people are demanding of it."

"If the Court should undertake to do such a thing in promoting some purpose deemed worthy at the moment, it is conceivable that under certain conditions its members might be tempted to overstep constitutional bounds to further corrupt and wicked designs, thus destroying the liberties of the people. In either event, they would be guilty of a violation of their oath of office and would deserve impeachment. How the members of the Supreme Court themselves feel on this subject was indicated by Justice Roberts in some comments he made in handing down a decision of the court invalidating an act of Congress. He said:

Functions of Court Explained
"There should be no misunderstanding as to the functions of this court. It is sometimes said that the court assumes power to overrule or control the action of the people's representatives. This is a misconception. The Constitution is the supreme law of the land, ordained and established by the people. All legislation must conform to the principles it lays down."

"When an act of Congress is appropriately challenged in the courts as not conforming to the constitutional mandate, the judicial branch of the government has only one duty—to lay the article of the Constitution which is involved beside the status which is challenged and to decide whether the latter squares with the former."

"This court neither approves nor condemns any legislative policy. Its delicate and difficult office is to ascertain and declare whether the legislation is in accordance with, or in contravention of, the provisions of the Constitution."

"It must be conceded by those who understand the meaning of our constitutional form of government that this was a correct statement of the facts."

"How the questions at issue are to be satisfactorily met and solved by the appointment of additional judges in the case of those now serving who are 70 years of age or over, and who fail to resign or retire, is not apparent. If the additional judges are to be men who are worthy to sit as members of our highest judicial tribunal; if they are to be men who deserve to fill the places that have been occupied by such illustrious figures in our national life as Marshall, Story, Holmes, Brandeis, and their kind, then instead of 5 to 4 decisions, to which some people object, we may expect some 8 to 7 decisions. That would be no improvement."

"Those who advocate the enlargement of the powers of the federal government should go about it openly and directly, rather than attempt to intimidate and coerce the Supreme court. Let a proposal to amend the Constitution be submitted to the states. Let the people read and study it, so that they may know what it all means."

Destructive Doctrine Exploded

"The argument has been used, even by those holding high official station, that we do not have time to amend the Constitution in the regular way. This delusive and destructive idea cannot be seriously entertained for a single moment. It can only mean that we no longer have the time nor the patience to submit to the forms of constitutional government. It means that the Constitution should be warped and twisted out of shape by judicial interpretation in such a way as to give validity to any act that Congress may pass."

"It is interesting to note that the last 11 amendments to the Constitution were ratified in about 15 months on the average. The 20th amendment was ratified in about 11 months, while the 21st was approved in less than 10 months."

"If sentiment throughout the country is so overwhelmingly in favor of certain measures that have been invalidated by the Supreme court, as it is reputed to be, it should be possible to secure the ratification of an amendment in a few months."

"Frequent reference is made to the proposed Child Labor amendment as an example of how long it takes to secure a constitutional amendment. This amendment, which was submitted in 1924, has thus far failed to receive the approval of the required number of states, largely because common sense revolts at the idea of classifying boys and girls up to 18 years of age as children. A large proportion of the soldiers in the Union and Confederate armies during the Civil war were under 18 years of age."

"As was to be expected, the word 'reactionary' is being hurled at those who have declared themselves as being opposed to packing the Supreme court. It is only necessary to say in this connection that epithets constitute a poor substitute for arguments of the kind that appeal to the God-given gift of reason."

"It would seem that the real reactionaries are those, however good their intentions may be, who would destroy the independence of the judiciary and take us back to the period of absolutism that existed prior to the time when, at Runnymede, the barons of England wrested Magna Charta from King John, more than 700 years ago."

"It will readily be agreed that perhaps the ablest and most scholarly foreign student of our institutions was James Bryce, author of 'The American Commonwealth,' and of that other notable work entitled 'Modern Democracies.' In his illuminating comments regarding the Supreme court, Mr. Bryce says in the book first named:

Bryce Foresees Present Situation
"The fathers of the Constitution studied nothing more than to secure the complete independence of the judiciary. The President was not permitted to remove the judges, nor Congress to diminish their salaries. One thing only was either forgotten or deemed undesirable, because highly inconvenient to determine—the number of judges in the Supreme court. Here was a weak point, a joint in the court's armor through which a weapon might some day penetrate."

"Suppose a Congress and President bent on doing something which the Supreme court deems contrary to the Constitution. They pass a statute. A case arises under it. The court on the hearing of the case unanimously declares the statute to be null, as being beyond the powers of Congress. Congress forthwith passes and the President signs another statute more than doubling the number of justices."

"The President appoints to the new justices men who are pledged to hold the former statute constitutional. The Senate confirms his appointments. Another case raising the validity of the disputed statute is brought up to the court. The new justices outvote the old ones; the statute is held valid, the security provided for the protection of the Constitution is gone like a morning mist."

"Here we have the unbiased opinion of an acknowledged expert in his chosen field. Following this amazingly accurate forecast, written more than 40 years ago, of the means that might be attempted under certain conditions to coerce the Supreme court, and thereby change the meaning of the Constitution, Mr. Bryce continues: 'What prevents such assaults on the fundamental law—assaults which, however immoral in substance, would be perfectly legal in form? Not the mechanism of government, for all its checks have been evaded. Not the conscience of the legislature and the President, for heated combatants seldom shrink from justifying the means by the end.'"

"Nothing but the fear of the people, whose broad good sense and attachment to the great principles of the Constitution may generally be relied on to condemn such a perversion of its forms. Yet if excitement has risen high over the country, a majority of the people may acquiesce; and then it matters little whether what is really a revolution be accomplished by openly violating or by merely distorting the forms of law."

"No other amendment to the Constitution is so urgently needed as one definitely naming the number of judges comprising the Supreme court. Nine judges are enough. That feature of the present bill dealing with the Supreme court should be defeated. Then such an amendment as has been indicated should be submitted to the States. Its adoption would forestall any future attempts to pack the Supreme court to influence its decisions."

Grange Believes in Progress
"The Grange believes in improvement and progress, as its history, covering more than two-thirds of a century, abundantly proves. We are not afraid of change, because change is the law of life. But we also recognize the wisdom of holding fast to that which is good."

"We know that the Constitution is good. Its provisions have proved adequate to carry us through every emergency, both in peace and in war, since the nation was founded. Under the Constitution, with the blessing of God, the American people have enjoyed a greater measure of liberty, happiness and prosperity than ever before has been vouchsafed to any nation."

"The Constitution is all that stands between us and that dreary doctrine of tyranny and dictatorship that man is the creature of the State."

"This year we will commemorate the 150th anniversary of the drafting of that great instrument. Celebrations will be held in every city, town and hamlet in the United States, with school children, patriotic societies and the rank and file of the people participating."

"What a cruel mockery it would be at such a time to inflict upon the Constitution a wound that scarcely fail to prove mortal."

"Let us take a look and see what has happened in other countries of the world. Across the Atlantic lies Italy, where Mussolini boastfully proclaims that liberty is a rotten corpse. In Germany, Hitler echoes and personifies the same sentiment. Both of these men rode into power as the professed champions of popular rights. Russia, after throwing off the yoke of the Czars, again grovels under the iron heel of despotism."

Democracy on the Back-Track
"Twenty years after the war to make the world safe for democracy, democracy everywhere is on the back-track. It behooves us to look to our foundations. How could any nation expect to remain secure and to prosper that would deliberately dishonor and violate the spirit of its fundamental law in the manner that is now proposed?"

"If this measure should be enacted, those who give it their support will be placed in imminent peril of standing accused at the bar of history with having supinely acquiesced in a step resulting in the overthrow of our constitutional form of government. Those arrayed against it will deserve to have their names enshrined in the hearts of the people as the faithful guardians of their most sacred rights."

"In fond remembrance of the brave and hardy spirits who carved this nation out of the wilderness and laid the foundations for its freedom and greatness; in the name of all its loyal defenders, and for the sake of the countless generations yet to come, the National Grange asks for the defeat of this rash attempt to destroy the independence of our highest court."

FRANK PRIEBE'S WEEKLY LETTER to POULTRY RAISERS

No one would expect to raise good corn if he planted it in the same field year after year. Yet many people still try to raise their chickens on the same ground every year—and wonder why they have so much trouble."

Poultry should be "rotated" just as grain crops are rotated. I know of a man who got 600 chicks last spring. He put 300 of them in a new brooder house which was out in an orchard on ground that hadn't been used for chickens for a number of years. The other 300 he put in an old laying house."

This winter, when they were tested for B. W. D., only 5 per cent of those that had been raised in the orchard, on clean ground, reacted. But 30 per cent of those that had been raised in the laying house reacted."

The chicks had come from the same flock, had been hatched at the same time, had been given the same feed and the same care. The only difference was that half of them had been raised on clean ground and the other half had not."

There is a man who knows it pays to raise chicks on clean ground!

Raise Your Chicks on Clean Ground

Most brooder houses now are portable and can be moved easily. The person who has a permanent brooder house cannot move it to clean ground, of course, but he can keep his chickens off the ground by using wire sun porches in connection with his brooder house."

I was out to see a man not long ago who uses sun porches for that very reason. As soon as the weather is warm enough for the chicks to be out of doors, he attaches the porches to the house."

They have plenty of room and they never touch the ground. They are on wire until they are old enough to be put out on range—and the range is clean range!

Sincerely,
Frank Pribe

Creep-fed calves started on grain before they go on grass will continue to go into the "creep" to eat, even though they run with the cows in the pasture, according to the college of agriculture, University of Illinois. Equal parts by measure of shelled corn and whole oats make a good feed for calves.

About 20 bushels of grain and 200 pounds of hay may be eaten by a calf up to weaning time in the fall, when they are usually sold at weights of about 700 pounds at nine or 10 months of age."

High Schools To Offer Classes In Road Safety Now

Jacksonville high school students may now enroll in a highway safety course just as they would take English or algebra. C. M. Seagraves, director of safety for the Illinois Agricultural association, reports.

It was through the efforts of several high school students who are members of the Morgan County Skilled Drivers' club that this course was offered. The need for such instruction was pointed out to the school officials by the activities of that club of young folks who are sparing no effort to make the highways safe."

Perhaps in years to come a course in driving will be required by all high schools for graduation just as English is now. When that time comes, says Seagraves, we will be able to drive our cars without the worry that some poor driver will run into us or force us off the road."

POULTRY HATCH TO BE SMALLER FOR '37 SEASON

High Price of Feed In Relation To Prices, Cause

Urbana, Ill., March 30.—Poultry hatchings in Illinois will be smaller this year than last, in the opinion of L. E. Card, chief in poultry husbandry, University of Illinois, college of agriculture.

His belief is based on a summary of the poultry and egg situation by the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

Principal factor in causing reduced hatchings is said to be the high price of feed in relation to prices received by farmers for their eggs. The lighter hatch and smaller laying flocks point toward reduced marketings of eggs next fall and winter.

Influenced in part by the egg-buying program of the agricultural adjustment administration, farm prices of eggs this spring have not declined by as much as the usual seasonal amount. A less than average seasonal decline in prices of poultry after May is anticipated on the basis of the prospective decrease in poultry production and marketings.

Profit Is Possible
With reduced hatchings, flock owners stand to profit by following the best poultry management practices possible, including the use of green feed as a supplement to the chick ration."

Green feeds go far toward making healthy poultry. Some investigators have suggested that fresh green forage helps to control intestinal parasites such as tapeworms. Apparently tapeworms do not thrive on diets rich in vitamin A, and most green feeds are rich in this vitamin."

Freshly cut green oats and alfalfa offer possibilities as a supplement to the regular chick ration. In each case the younger the growth of green feed, the better will be the feeding value."

U. S. Ready To Take Place As Exporter

Washington, March 30.—(AP)—Government grain experts say recent trends in world wheat prices indicate the United States was getting ready to re-enter the wheat export business after four seasons as an importer."

Farmers planted the largest winter wheat acreage of record last fall and intend to harvest a comparatively large spring wheat acreage this year."

Assuming normal yields, government grain experts said this country may harvest enough wheat this year for domestic needs, building up short reserve stocks, and still have some left over."

Both world and domestic wheat prices have been at peak levels for recent years, but the government studies showed domestic prices this year had been nearer to world levels than in any season since 1934."

A decline in spread between prices on domestic markets and in Winnipeg and Liverpool, govern-

SOY BEANS TO BE INCREASED HAY REDUCED

Winter Wheat Acreage Yet To Be Determined

A sharp increase in the total acreage of soybeans and barley and a substantial reduction in tame hay acreage this season in Illinois as compared with the harvested acreage of these crops last year is indicated by the March 1 intentions reports from crop correspondents to the Illinois and federal departments of agriculture. This survey also indicates prospective acreage decreases of 1 per cent for corn and 4 per cent for oats."

The acreage of Illinois winter wheat sown last fall at 2,782,000 acres was the largest in ten years, however, winter and spring damage to this crop, due both to thinning and loss of acreage, has been more severe than usual. The acreage of winter wheat remaining for harvest will be determined by later surveys. Should the abandonment of Illinois winter wheat acreage be considerably more than expected by crop reporters on March 1, it is likely to result in slightly larger acreage of corn, oats and soybeans than indicated in this report. With average spring planting conditions the total planted acreage of Illinois crops this year is expected to be slightly larger than that harvested during the past two years and the 5-year average for 1928 to 1932."

The March 1 survey for Illinois indicates a prospective corn acreage for harvest of 9,173,000 acres compared with 9,266,000 acres in 1936. 8,273,000 acres in 1935, and the 1928-1932 average of 9,323,000 acres. Total soybean acreage outlook is for 2,098,000 acres or 17 per cent larger than 1,793,000 harvested for beans and hay in 1936, 2,270,000 in 1935 and the 1928-1932 average of 681,000 acres. A large part of this increased acreage over that of 1936 will be for hay purposes to offset the heavy loss of red clover seedings last season."

Intended Acreage
Intended acreage of other Illinois crops, given in thousands of acres, with 1936 acreages and 1928-32 average acreages in parentheses follow: Oats 3,355 (3,495) (4,313), spring wheat 33 (34) (133), barley 130 (100) (410), potatoes 44 (43) (50), sweet potatoes 6 (5) (6), cowpeas 165 (165) (174), tame hay 2,674 (2,943) (2,646)."

The report for the United States indicates that farmers are planning material increases in the acreage of spring crops compared with the acreage harvested in the drought year of 1936. Nearly all crops show increases and some of the increases appear large, but with supplies on farms reduced by drought and with the demand for most farm products showing definite signs of recovery, the intended acreage does not appear to be abnormal. A comparison with the average acreages during the 1928-32 period indicates that this year's acreage of most spring crops will be below average, the chief exceptions being nominal increases in spring wheat, hay, grain sorghums, and sweet potatoes, and large acreages of soybeans, cowpeas and peanuts. Prospective U. S. crop acreages given in thousands of acres with 1936 and 1928-1932 average acreage in parentheses follow: Corn 94,840 (92,829) (103,419), all spring wheat 20,918 (11,212) (20,414), oats 35,660 (33,213) (40,015), barley 10,901 (8,322) (12,645), potatoes 3,232 (3,058) (3,327), sweet potatoes 807 (822) (771), soybeans 6,300 (5,635) (2,979), cowpeas 3,336 (3,263) (1,869), tame hay 55,967 (57,055) (55,153)."

Oats pasture for fattening steers was satisfactory last summer for O. V. Blair, Stark county. He fed shelled corn, soybean oilmeal and some soybeans."

ment men said, indicated an adjustment to an export basis already had started."

MID-AFTERNOON SNACK IS RATED HEALTHFUL IDEA

Increase of Sugar Content Reduces Your Fatigue

Urbana, Ill., March 30.—Taking time out for tea or hot chocolate or fruit juice in the mid-afternoon may be the coming practise for American folk.

While tea drinking has long been condemned by some, owing to the fact that the heavy food which often accompanies the drink may destroy the dinner appetite, there is a place for the light mid-afternoon snack, say nutrition research workers from the home economic laboratories of the college of agriculture, University of Illinois.

The reason they offer is this. To work takes energy. Energy is dependent upon the sugar content in the blood. Each time a meal is eaten, the sugar in the blood increases but during the course of working hours it decreases, and along about 4 o'clock in the afternoon it is the lowest of any time in the day. The feeling of fatigue which accompanies this lowering is felt by the individual, and the work he is doing becomes slower and less efficient. A small amount of food and drink might correct this feeling for the time being.

Another reason for time out for tea, say these nutrition workers, is that during the day, the body suffers three losses which call for restorative action. The first is the replacement of water lost during the day. The second is rest to relieve fatigue which comes from mental and physical exertion. The third is building up a fuel reserve for the next day's work.

American folk attempt to carry out all three restorative actions at once at the dinner table, while in those countries where it is the custom to have afternoon tea, the loss of water and fatigue are corrected before the re-fueling procedure of dinner is attempted.

Fancy tea parties with cakes, candies and ice cream are not to be favored, say the nutritionists.

Plain bread and butter or a small water or two might accompany the drink without dulling the appetite.

Illinois Briefs

Gilman—(AP)—Fear for the safety of their daughter and son-in-law on a Mexican hunting trip was dispelled with receipt of a telegram by Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Mann saying the couple, Shirley and Russell Stephenson, was safe in Mexico City. It was the first word concerning them since they left Acapulco, Mexico, by airplane.

Springfield—(AP)—State Fire Marshal Sherman V. Coultas announced discharge of Deputy John P. Hart of Rockford who, Coultas said, had reported that $1,500, his credentials and a revolver had been taken from him in two taverns on Sunday.

Chicago—(AP)—Phillip Canella, arrested two weeks ago with three others in a raid by Federal agents on an illicit still near Woodstock, Ill., was held to the grand jury in $5,000 bond, charged with violation of the internal revenue law. Similar action was taken in the cases of Michael Anzeldo, Tony Laudicina and Tony Rizzo, all of Beloit, Wis., who were implicated with Canella.

Washington—(AP)—The St. Louis milk marketing area has been reduced with the removal of Collinsville township in Madison county, Ill., under provisions of an amendment to the order of milk handlers in that area. The agricultural adjustment administration disclosed. The amendment further required a reduction of 10 cents per hundred weight of milk in each of the class prices during April, May and June of each year.

Washington—(AP)—Senator William H. Dieterich of Illinois, replying to a question as to whether the Senate judiciary committee would conduct a public hearing on the nomination of Rep. J. Leroy Adair of Quincy, Ill., to the Federal district judgeship at Springfield, Ill., said he knew of "no objection from any source whatsoever" to the nomination. The matter had been referred by the Senate judiciary group to the sub-committee on nominations of which Dieterich is chairman.

Los Angeles—(AP)—Detectives said police records of Franklin Wyatt, 44, arrested on suspicion of forgery and impersonating a Federal officer, showed he is wanted by authorities of Peoria, Ill.

Frankfort, Ky.—(AP)—Acting Governor Kean Johnson ordered the return of Noble Marshall, who will be released on parole from the state prison at Eddyville, Ky., this week, to Illinois to finish serving a sentence at the state prison on requisition of Illinois authorities who claimed he violated terms of his parole granted in December, 1932.

Sewanee, Tenn.—(AP)—Sewanee's tennis team took five singles and one doubles match to defeat Augusta College of Rock Island, Ill. 6-1.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Stranded in San Diego on vacation, MARIEA, BRITAIN and BETTY HAYNES obtain an assignment with the Airspeed Trailer company to travel up the coast, demonstrating the new de luxe trailer. Their suspicions are aroused somewhat when ARNOLD Sloan, of the trailer company, fails to ask for either bond or references.

They return to their apartment to pack. At their door they surprise a handsome young man trying to enter. Apologetically, he tells them he stepped off at the wrong floor and that he is GERRY NEAL.

They start north and pick up Neal, hitch-hiking. He tells them he is to meet a friend, JACK SPEDDON, at Long Beach. But at Long Beach auto camp when Speddon appears, Neal has disappeared from the trailer. Driving off with Betty to check Neal's disappearance, Speddon fails to return. Frantic, Martha calls police. Officer SLOAN proves of little help. Then Martha gets a wire, signed "Betty," advising Betty can't explain but will meet Martha in a San Francisco hotel.

Richly furnished, Martha starts to Fresno and at Santa Barbara, utterly fatigued, she parks her trailer near the beach and drops to sleep.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER VI

When Martha awakened, raised herself sleepily to the window, the bright yellow sun of Santa Barbara was high overhead. To her embarrassment, cars were parked all along the block which had been so deserted only a few hours before. The snowy-white sand of the beach was dotted with the bright bathing suits and multi-colored sun-umbrellas. Offshore a dozen small sailing craft played about, and as Martha gazed from the window a smart speedboat dashed by, tossing spray high above its sedan top.

But as Martha watched she was possessed of only one thought—how Betty would have enjoyed the movement and color of such a scene. Hurriedly she dashed her face with cold water, made a slapdash attempt to fix her hair presently. Across the street was a little cafe and she decided it would be quicker to breakfast there.

Returning to the trailer after a brief breakfast which she hardly tasted, Martha confronted a pleasant-looking motorcycle officer in uniform. He smiled and touched his cap. "Sorry, miss. We don't allow trailers to park on this street, but you can find a place—"

"I'm leaving right away, officer," Martha interrupted and climbed into the coupe. So quickly did she suit the action to the word that the officer started after trailer and car open-mouthed.

The pleasant officer scratched his head, uttering a puzzled and audible comment.

And despite the trailer in tow, Martha did hurry. At all times she held close to the maximum speed limit, and on the lone straightaways she took a chance against the law. One thought kept dinning in her brain: she must reach the Palace Hotel in San Francisco and contact Betty Haynes.

At every little town she paused at gasoline stations on the main highway, asking for information as to a dark blue roadster. But none had any help to give.

"That's the road right there. San Francisco is straight ahead. If you want to go down to the Carmel coast, you turn left here," the attendant explained to Martha.

AND then, late that afternoon, she reached Salinas. Wearily she drove into a gasoline yard and asked the same question once more.

"Dark blue roadster?" the attendant said. "Y-yes, there was one in here."

Martha straightened in her seat. "Do you remember, was there a woman in it?"

"Yes. A woman and a man. A thin fellow—and a girl with light hair."

Excitedly Martha reached into the pocket of her jacket, brought out the slip of paper on which she'd written Speddon's license number. "Was that the license?"

"Gosh," he said slowly. "I'm not sure. I remember looking at the plate when I was filling the tank, and it seems to me it was something like that. But I can't be sure."

Martha fixed his glance. "Please try to remember. Did you notice anything at all strange about the girl? I mean did she—was she acting perfectly natural?"

"Well . . . I thought she looked sort of down in the mouth. Like maybe they'd had a fight or something. People come in here like that a lot."

"It might have been fright, mightn't it?"

"Scared? Well—well, I guess she could've been."

"And they went on toward San Francisco?"

"The attendant looked at her. "No they didn't. They turned down toward Carmel and Monterey."

"How do you know that?"

"That's the road right there."

San Francisco is straight ahead. If you want to go down to the Carmel coast you turn left here."

She paid for her gasoline and oil, drove swiftly out of the station lot and down the road to Carmel and Monterey. "That must surely have been Betty and Speddon," she told herself. Recklessly she remembered that Airspeed's itinerary had called for stops in King City and Salinas, had kept to the main highway. Whatever happened now, she had certainly lost the confidence of her employer!

DIPPING down toward the coast she found herself in a soft gray fog that made slower driving a necessity. Impatiently Martha peered against the thick wall that diffused the glow of her headlights and turned the growing dusk confusingly. As she drove slowly on she became conscious of a strange change in the country around her. Quicker, sprawling cypress trees clutched down from the banks on each side of the road.

But at last she reached more level ground, passed an occasional lighted farm house. By now she felt against her cheeks the keen tangy air of the coast, and in her nose the smell of the sea. Suddenly she reached a brilliantly lighted place in the road, saw the wide gates of Del Monte and the huge hotel beyond the trees. But, reasoning that Speddon would not pause at such a populated resort, Martha pressed on toward Monterey.

At a more normal time she would have been utterly delighted with the little town, holding its savor of old Spain, still beautiful with new buildings whose architecture matched the old. But now she had but one purpose—to find Betty. In a parking lot at the edge of town she detached the trailer and started in the little coupe to make a round of the hotels. But the search was fruitless. Not even Carmel, a few minutes' drive away, yielded a trace of a dark blue roadster carrying a thin man and a blond young girl.

Returning from Carmel in the rising fog, Martha chided herself for trusting the observation of the attendant at Salinas. "I've wasted time," she told herself bitterly. "I should have gone straight on to San Francisco, as the wire said." But she was too weary now to attempt the night drive through the fog to Salinas. The fatigue of the previous day was still with her, and this second day's driving had been telling. A little sleep, and then she could reach San Francisco in three or four hours.

She brought the coupe back to the trailer and climbed stiffly out. She had not tasted food since earlier in the day at Santa Barbara, yet the only thought in her mind was to gain just enough rest to make the remaining miles into San Francisco. Forlornly she started toward the Airspeed trailer, and was startled to see a man standing near its door. At first Martha could not believe her eyes. Her sudden fright gave way to anger as she realized that the man was Gerry Neal!

SEED SPOTTING ECONOMICAL IN TREE PLANTING

Approximately Two Million Planted Certain Areas

The practise of "seed spotting" for soil erosion control is enabling many farmers to plant oak, hickory, and walnut trees without much expense, says H. H. Bennett, chief of the soil conservation service. This, he says, is nature's method with the advantage of selection added.

This practise, Bennett explains, consists in planting three or four nuts of the species desired in small, shallow holes 6 or 8 feet apart. This cuts out the expense of buying seedlings and the necessity of digging deep holes. Under favorable conditions seed spotting seems to be as effective as transplanting seedlings. Walnuts, hickory nuts, and all the black oaks are planted in early spring; white oak in the fall.

Under its program of woodland management for erosion control, the soil conservation service in 1936 supervised the planting of approximately 2,000,000 "seed spots" on its demonstration areas. Present plans call for 2,500,000 seedlings by the spot method in 1937. On the service's soil and water conservation projects the seed spotting areas usually are laid out in openings in farm woodlands, on badly eroded places, and on steep hillsides to provide a soil cover that will check erosion. On hillsides the spots are usually staggered so as to eliminate any open rows running up and down the slope, which might lead to gullying. The soil around the spot is "scalped" to remove grass and weeds which would compete with the young trees.

Most of the seed spotting has been in the eastern part of the country principally in the central hardwood regions, where soil and climatic conditions are favorable to the growth of oak, hickory and walnut trees.

POETS' CORNER

A REFRESHING STORY

Glad indeed the Easter story Sending courage to the soul, When our hearts so sorrow laden learn that death is not the goal.

This poor world with all its sinning Foul with odor of its strife, Needs to hear again the story Of Easter and eternal life.

Joyous songs, so glad, refreshing, Give us strength to persevere—I would always praise the Savior And remember He is near.

May the songs, full spirit laden Quicken many a weary heart, Like refreshing showers from heaven.

To hard soil, new life import.

PRINCETON--BUREAU CO.

By Besse Yearshaw, 211 Park Avenue, E., Phone 2764.

Princeton--Mrs. Richard M. Skinner and daughter, Sally, have returned from their Easter vacation trip to Washington, D. C. They report a most delightful time, and each gained a little weight in spite of the rigors of sight seeing.

Attorney G. C. Wilson and granddaughter, Winifred, spent Sunday in Milwaukee visiting with the young lady's father, Attorney William W. Wilson, who has been undergoing a series of observation tests by physicians at Columbia hospital at Milwaukee. William is making his headquarters at the Elks club while there.

Although Tuesday, March 23 was the real wedding date, Mr. and Mrs. Gust J. Peterson didn't celebrate their 45th wedding anniversary until Saturday evening of this past week. "On that night they entertained between 40 and 50 friends and relatives at their comfortable home at 119 North Church street. The guests were invited for six thirty and the delicious repast was served on individual trays making the serving of so large a gathering much easier. The house was made additionally attractive by all the gorgeous floral offerings sent in by different ones to mark the anniversary. One bouquet especially noticed was one of 45 Talisman roses sent by some friends of their daughter, Miss Harriett Peterson, who teaches in Joliet. Besides the flowers Mr. and Mrs. Peterson were also the recipients of many fine gifts, making the celebration a most memorable occasion. Out-of-town guests were the two daughters: Mrs. Wesley Wood of St. Louis, and Miss Harriet, of Joliet; Mrs. Emily Phelan and Clifford McFeeley of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. Vunkle, and his son and wife and daughter, Donna, of Ogden, Iowa; and Mr. and Mrs. Ed Peterson and daughters, Elizabeth and Marcia, and Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Johnson, and Mrs. O. C. Johnson, all from Boone, Iowa. Several of these guests remained over Sunday and attended the Easter concert Sunday evening at the high school given by the combined choirs of the Princeton churches under the direction of the Reverend Clarence Johnson of Davenport, Iowa.

Dennis Cusic of Rockford, spent Easter Sunday visiting with his mother, Mrs. Marshall Cusic on East Peru street.

On this past Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. Charles Chelin, just south east of Princeton on what is known as the old Carpenter farm, invited in about two dozen guests to help them celebrate the occasion of their 40th wedding anniversary. This couple were married at Hadley, Minn., and came to this part of the country thirty-one years ago, and then lived north of town until moving to their present site about fourteen years ago.

The Easter concert held Sunday evening at the Princeton high school by the combined choirs of the Princeton churches and directed by the Rev. Clarence Johnson of Davenport, Iowa, was attended by over 1200 people, yet only $101.34 was received from the silver offering. A mighty fine showing with so little preliminary work with Mr. Johnson, while the Hammond electric organ with Helen Seales Westbrook of Chicago at the console brought added grandeur to the Easter numbers. And it was a nice compliment to the members of the choir when Mr. Johnson was heard to say that the choir directed easily. After two such splendid concerts as this and the Christmas one, there will without a doubt be more in the future.

J. Edgar Fuller and R. V. Pitcher were named to be in charge of this week's dinner and bridge for the men's third bridge tournament of this season on Thursday evening at the Bureau Valley Country club.

The April meeting of the D. A. R. will be held on Friday, April 2, at the Country club at 2:30 with Mrs. Lou Belle Moore Oliver as hostess. Mrs. Josephine Stoddy Flint will present the program, "The Carolinas and Georgia."

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Zearing spent Saturday evening and Easter Sunday in Galesburg with the families of their two daughters, the Hinchcliffs and Gunnings.

RED OAK

Red Oak--Rev. and Mrs. M. A. Goss motored to Rockford, Monday and visited Clifford Albrecht who is a patient there.

Robert and Paul Albrecht, Elaine Guithier and Cecil Goss are spending their Easter vacation at their respective homes.

Mr. and Mrs. Eric Anderson were Dixon shoppers Thursday. Robert Hammerle accompanied Willard Burkey, Grace Burkey and Kathryn Burkey to Waukegan on Friday. Kathryn Burkey had been a house guest of Lee Burkey's the past two weeks. The others returned Monday.

E. H. Burkey and Ardan Jackson made a business trip to Sterling, Saturday morning.

Marlousie Hammerle spent the week end with her sister, Mrs. Milton Burkey.

Mr. and Mrs. Milton Burkey, Marlousie Hammerle and Caroline Burkey were Princeton shoppers, Saturday afternoon.

Rufus Bacon was a business caller in Princeton Saturday. H. G. Harter of Toledo, Ohio, was a dinner guest, Friday at the Joe Hammerle home.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Hoffman and sons of Rockford spent their Easter vacation at the Hoffman home in Walnut.

Mr. and Mrs. George Guithier, Elaine and Francis were Dixon shoppers Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Pfoff and family and Erwin Gower and girl friend of Princeton were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gower.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Heaton and family were Sunday dinner guests of Mrs. Ioder in Dixon.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Pope and daughter Eleanor motored to Indianapolis, Ind., to see their son, Everett, graduate on Saturday from school of chiropractors. They remained over Sunday visiting Mr. and Mrs. Everett Pope.

Janet Gaynor says: "Leading artists of the screen prefer Luckies"

"I live at the beach most of the year and there is hardly a weekend that a number of friends don't drop in. Naturally, I keep several brands of cigarettes on hand for guests, but the Luckies are always the first to disappear. I suppose it's just natural that Luckies would be the favorite brand because most of my friends in pictures have discovered that the long hours of rehearsing and shooting at the studio place a severe tax on the throat. Leading artists of the screen prefer Luckies because they are a light smoke that sympathizes with tender throats."

THE FINEST TOBACCOS—
"THE CREAM OF THE CROP"

An independent survey was made recently among professional men and women—lawyers, doctors, lecturers, scientists, etc. Of those who said they smoke cigarettes, more than 87% stated they personally prefer a light smoke.

Miss Gaynor verifies the wisdom of this preference, and so do other leading artists of the radio, stage, screen and opera. Their voices are their fortunes. That's why so many of them smoke Luckies. You, too, can have the throat protection of Luckies—a light smoke, free of certain harsh irritants removed by the exclusive process "It's Toasted". Luckies are gentle on the throat.
